Lives Brightened by Artificial Larynx, Aids to Defective Hearing, Electrical Stethoscope and Other Devices Produced by Bell Laboratories Scientists While Researching Into Transmission of Voice Tones Over Wires

DISCOVERING materials and methods for constant improvement of the telephone service is the basic objective of the scientists making up the staff of the Bell Telephone Laboratories.

The Laboratories, occupying a group of buildings on West Street, New York, can trace their history back to the stuffy attic workshop in which the telephone was born.

Out of the scientists' unremitting labors have come a number of by-products which have brightened the lives of many thousands of sufferers from defects of speech and hearing.

There is a long list of the by-products produced by the Laboratories' scientists.

The artificial larynx, which enables a person who has had his larynx removed surgically to talk as plainly as he could with normal vocal organs, is an outstanding example.

From the Laboratories has come an electrical stethoscope, technically known as a stethophone, which enables physicians to amplify to any desired degree the internal sounds involved in heart conditions under diagnosis.

Other Laboratories Developments While researching into the broad field of speech transmission, Laboratories' scientists also have developed:

Ultra-violet photomicroscopic apparatus which renders visible particles hitherto too small to be seen by the human eye.

A weatherometer, in which are created synthetic sunlight and artificial rain, to test paints, varnishes and other materials under varying weather conditions.

Television, which nearly everyone agrees will some day be one of the practical scientific triumphs of the ages, from the standpoint of entertainment and educational values.

Ear-phones and other devices for aiding the hard-of-hearing to hear, not only in tele-voice conversations, but over telephone wires as well.

A special telephone mouthpiece to enable persons whose voices normally would be too faint to be heard, to be plainly audible in telephone conversations.

Interesting as these humanitarian by-products are, however, and helpful as they have been in relieving suffering and making happier lives, they are numerically almost negligible in comparison with the huge volume of devices invented, and improved methods and materials discovered by the Bell Laboratories' scientists in their unremitting labors in the direction of a telephone service that has grown and will continue to grow better and better with each passing year.

NO GOOD REASON FOR PESSIMISM

F. M. Law, President American Bankers Association, Sees Improving Conditions and a Changing Future

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There is no good reason for pessimism today, for though the "depression is not by any means over we are coming out of it," F. M. Law, President of the American Bankers Association told the American Institute of Banking convention here recently.

"Banking is a necessary business and will endure," Mr. Law said. "In order to endure, it must be the right sort of banking, under the right sort of management."

"The American Institute of Banking commands and is entitled to great respect because its major objective is to teach and promote the right kind of banking. One of the chief reasons for my faith in the future of banking is...

chapters, with over 50,000 members, and with 33,000 students enrolled, and it is doing a good job in teaching these thousands of bank employees what good banking is, and what it is not."

Business Men Should Recognize New Conditions

Business men everywhere, and especially bankers, he said, will do well to recognize and to understand the many changes that are occurring, for "it is fatal to be obsessed with the belief that any and all change from the existing order is heresy."

"Banking is a serious business, he said and "I know not one single man or woman who has made a success of it who has not been over a long period of years a hard worker." He added:

"Take for your motto the old German phrase 'Ich Dien.' (I serve). Meaning what? Serve your depositors, your stockholders and society."

"Let no man tell you that private initiative is dead. On the contrary, it commands a greater premium today than ever before. If you and others like you have courage enough, if you possess patience, if you have a passion for hard work, and if, with an open mind, you look to and prepare for the future and opportunities which are sure to come, you cannot be denied. Your generation will add prestige to the honorific title that we know as banking."

SEES TURNING POINT IN BANKING HISTORY

NEW YORK.—The American Bankers Association Journal in its July issue presents the following review of banking and business conditions:

"It is an almost universal opinion among bankers that June has been the turning point in banking history in the matter of recovery. Reasons for the optimism are twofold—the condition of the banks and the prospects of better banking business."

"The reorganization of the banking system after the holiday of sixteen months ago is now practically complete. The comparatively few banks yet to be reorganized and reopened are no longer a serious factor in the situation. The year's preparatory period for the enforcement of major provisions of the Banking Act of 1933 has passed, and banks now have a definite idea of where they stand."
