Rev. Dr. Jairus Polk Moore, 87, a Reformed church missionary in China for forty years, died at Landsale.

Miss Margaret Delaney, a student in Lock Haven Teachers' College, was at her home here over the week-end.

After an illness from grip for over two weeks, John H. Puff, the handyman of the borough, is able to be about again.

Mrs. Ralph E. Dinges of town, suffered a serious heart attack, on Saturday, requiring the prompt service of a physician.

The members of the Ladies' Temple, K. G. E., recently completed quilting a handsome patch quilt, a gift to Mrs. Harold Bradford.

Miss M. Louise Smith publishes letters of administration on the estate of her father, the late Thomas L. Smith, in this issue of the Reporter.

John Mattis, who with his mother lived west of Centre Hall on one of the Van Tries farms, a short time ago purchased the Comer farm, immediately south of Hubersburg, and is now living on it.

William Hoy, who some years ago was tenant on the Kennedy farm, west of the borough, now living in Walker township, is in delicate health at this time. His father, who is a member of the family, has long been an invalid.

Mrs. D. C. Mitterling, on Wednesday night of last week, entertained a small group of friends at "500" at her home in Centre Hall. The ladies fortunate enough to sit around the four tables, were delightfully entertained. The refreshments played a large part in the evening's program.

The depression is not in any way having an effect on the number of dogs in Centre county wearing the legal 1935 license tag. The number sold by Mrs. Emma B. Hunter, county treasurer, is given out as 3600, which number is about the same as the records of a year ago reveal.

Henry C. Penta, 92, veteran of the Civil war, who served for seven months in the Confederate Libby Prison at Richmond, Va., and at a prison camp at Salisbury, N. C., died on Thursday at his home in York. He served with Company A, 87th Infantry, Pennsylvania Volunteers.

Ninety-two new students were added to five thousand annual enrollment at second semester registration at the Pennsylvania State College last week. The new students include 43 entering the freshman class, 25 transferred from other colleges, and 23 graduate students.

The West Susquehanna Classis of the Evangelical and Reformed Church met in annual sessions at 10:00 o'clock A. M., February 12th, in the First Reformed church at Middleburg, the Rev. H. G. Snyder, pastor, Elder D. K. Keller, delegate-elder primarius of the charge, accompanied Rev. D. R. Keener to the two-day meeting.

Wednesday night of last week was the coldest experienced in this section this winter. The weather bureau thermometer operated from this office registered eleven degrees below zero, at some time during the night. The Bellefonte airport reported sixteen below. Reports from other sections in the county ranged from fifteen to thirty degrees below, the large variation no doubt is due to at least considerable extent of faulty thermometers.

John M. Blausier informs the Reporter that there have been slight changes made on the Farm Board for the current year, which are here noted: Leo Smeltzer, Bellefonte, has been named vice-president, taking the place of Malcolm Musser, Christ Schenck, Howard, and M. A. Burkholder, are also no longer on the board. New members are Francis Smith, Blanchard; Willard Harter, Nittany; John M. Blausier, Centre Hall, and Orvis Orndorf, Woodward.

Two business callers at the Reporter office on Saturday were Fred Bender, of State College, the Hawleigh products man, and Elmer Miller, of Potter township, who for the past 15 years has been in the railway service as a mail clerk, his run being between Pittsburgh and New York. Mr. Miller's task on this busy run is so arduous that it is deemed necessary after a six-day work schedule, to lay off eight days. This rest period is usually spent at the home of his mother, Mrs. Roy Miller, near Centre Hall.

Earl Grove, and James Farner, of near Pottery Mills, were callers at this office Monday morning. Mr. Grove is living on the Walter Hosterman farm, but by April 1st will vacate it and become tenant on the Meeker farm, along State highway route No. 53, which farm Calvin Lingis tenanted for three years. Mr. Hosterman, now engaged in the electrical department, at Penna. State College, will move on to his farm in the spring and commute to work. Maynard Barger, who lives nearby the Hosterman place, will conduct the farming.

Fifteen of the twenty-four members of the Junior class in the Centre Hall High school were guests of Miss Margaret Ross, one of their number, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ross, west of Old Fort, Wednesday night of last week. The amusements varied, and were supervised by two faculty members, Miss Geary and Mr. Jamison. The Juniors went to the Ross home carrying with them refreshments ample for the evening, but when it came time for the spread, Mrs. Ross was found to have prepared delicious ice cream and other provisions that made a complete layout for the young people.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Sunshine, and a faint hint of spring. Miss Ruth Zang, a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Zang, Centre Hall, a Penn State student, became a member of Gamma Phi Beta fraternity.

HIS EYES NEED GOOD LIGHTING

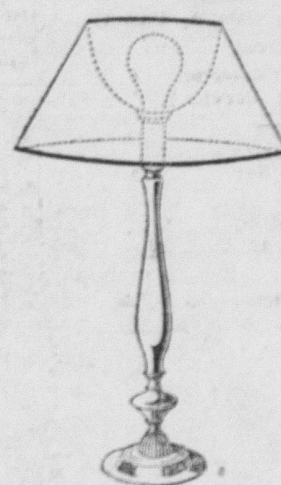

... And Now Good Lighting Will Cost Less Than Ever!

"ALL Gaul," Caesar wrote, "is divided into three parts." But much has happened to the world since Caesar lived.

Today's history student taxes his eyes... within a few months... more than Caesar did in a lifetime. For modern civilization puts a real burden upon our eyes.

The test for comfortable lighting, like Gaul, is divided into three parts: Enough light on the seeing task... enough general illumination in the room... and freedom from glare.

Modern reading and study lamps, as approved by the Illuminating Engineering Society, have been carefully designed to give proper light for close seeing tasks. Secure one at your dealer's for your study table... you will treasure it.

New "I. E. S." Reading and Study Lamp
... Ample Light
... Well Distributed
... No Glare!

ASK THE POLICEMAN... ASK THE FIREMAN

about adequate street lighting..

Police and fire protection are indispensable to any organized community. Policemen and firemen are responsible for the safeguarding of life and property, risking their own lives in the performance of duty. Street lighting is their unfailing assistant. These municipal activities, affecting the safety of each man, woman and child in the community, deserve every possible support. Policemen and firemen will readily agree that they can give more efficient protection when they have good street illumination.
