POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR SHERIFF.

FARM CALENDAR.

Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

AVOID CHICK LOSSES—Over-crowding of chicks may result in heavy losses during the first few weeks of brooding, uneven growth of chicks, poor feathering, coccidiosis, and cannibalism. A fairly safe rule to follow is three chicks to each square foot of space, with not more than 250 chicks kept together.

PREVENT PLANT INJURY—Tomato seed treated with corrosive sublimate to control damping-off of seedlings should not be planted in soil treated with formaldehyde or formaldehyde dust because of danger of injury to the plants.

SAVE THE LAMB CROP—Providing the ewes with sufficient feed will help them to produce strong lambs that will live. Exercise, salt, and plenty of fresh water are three very cheap essentials in preparing for a good lamb crop.

IMPROVE GRAPE VINES—Correct pruning will improve the vineyard where excessive wood and insufficient fertilizer have resulted in low vigor. Hard pruning to fewer canes than are usually left will be beneficial.

PLAN THE GARDEN—When the garden is planned provision should be made for plenty of vegetables to can and store, as well as to use fresh from the garden. The food requirements of the family can be more adequately met when the garden makes its full contribution.

GROW GOOD CHECKS—A good chick is free from pullorum disease or bacillary white diarrhea. Is well bred, from parent stock well fed and managed, and is well hatched. Good parent stock is that, capable of laying 100 eggs or more a year per bird and these eggs should be of definitely established large size, 24 ounces or more per dozen.

MARCH—AND KITE-MINDED BOYS

The month of March is generally associated with St. Patrick's Day, high winds and kite flying.

A good March wind is a delight to all kite-minded boys and affords them healthy, outdoor sport. There are dangers in kite flying which boys should guard against and which parents should carefully point out.

A good kite flyer always takes these safety precautions:

He will never fly his kite near electric light, telephone or trolley wires or near high voltage transmission towers. He does not use wire or tin-rod twine of any sort for a kite string. Wet string is also a conductor of electricity and will cause as much damage as wire if brought in contact with electric wires.

He never makes or flies a kite with metal ribs.

He does not run across public highways while flying his kite.

He always flies his kite in open, unobstructed places away from traffic.

He does not attempt to climb poles or knock down entangled kites with stones or sticks.

He doesn't let his kite go over radio aerials.

Every boy wants to be one of the best kite flyers. The best kite flyers always make sure that all safety precautions are taken just as an expert airplane pilot carefully observes every safety rule. In so doing serious injury to property and person is avoided and at the same time they will greatly enhance the fun of kite flying.

In case of any emergency in which electric lines are involved a call to the West Penns. Power Co. office will bring trained assistance.
