PURE-BRED LIVESTOCK EXHIBIT AT GRANGE FAIR IS OF LOCAL DEVELOPMENT

Grange Fair premium books have been distributed. The management takes pride in its appearance as well as its contents. Campers and prospective exhibitors will do well to read carefully all directions and instructions governing these departments. By so doing and observing same much confusion may be avoided.

Livestock entries are coming in rapidly so the management reports, and there is every indication exhibit space will be crowded to the limit of capacity. The management has reason to be proud of this department in that all livestock brought to Grange park and placed on display during the week of the Fair is not only pure-bred, but owned and developed by the individual exhibitor and comes from the buildings housing these exhibits. Not one commercial exhibit has ever been solicited or accepted by the Grange Fair management, but notwithstanding, the most important breeds of cattle, hogs and poultry will be found in the barns and splendid specimens in evidence.

The Horticultural department promises to be of unusual importance this year and planning to arranged a fine display of products grown in the gardens and orchards and on the farms of Central Pennsylvania. The season has been very favorable for the growth of such products. We may expect here quality above the average as well as quantity and variety in the display on the shelves and tables available for this purpose. Some improvements have been ordered in the buildings housing these exhibits which will greatly aid in making better arrangement possible.

On Monday morning, August 26, at 7:00 o'clock, superintendents in each department with able assistants will be in readiness to receive, classify and arrange all exhibits.

Judging will begin Wednesday morning, August 28 and all exhibits must remain in place until Thursday evening, August 29, 8:00 o'clock.

The schools of Centre county will have a big place in the program for the 1935 Grange Fair. There will be adequate space in the fine new building devoted to the educational department and the superintendent, Prof. T. I. Mairs, as well as the Centre county superintendent of schools assure us the response by teachers and pupils to the appeal sent out has been very gratifying and a large number of schools are planning to arrange and display results of the work accomplished in the past year. Visitors will have a fine opportunity to view examples of the work of Centre county schools suitably arranged for easy inspection.

The Vocational students and their work occupy no small place in the educational program of the Grange Fair. This important division in modern education will also be represented by complete examples showing the progress made during the past year in developing occupational desires and trends among young people.
