DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take a regulated dose till Nature restores regularity.

Hello, Everybody!

"Sleepwalker Aloft"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

WELL, sir, I've been around boats a little during my life, and I've seen a few of the old-fashioned windjammers.

It has been my luck, also, to see the sailors go aloft to take in sail, and the way they scoot around up there in the rigging just about takes my breath away.

I wouldn't risk my life climbing around on those masts for any amount of money. But if I did, by golly, I'd want to be wearing a safety belt strapped around the mast, and have a fireman's net spread out down at the bottom, waiting for me to fall into it.

Certainly I wouldn't want to repeat the performance of Richard O. Malmberg, for this lad didn't do a thing but go playing around in the rigging of a sailing vessel in his sleep.

And since Dick didn't know anything about it till along toward the end, we'll have to tell the first part of this yarn as it was seen by the skipper, the mate and the helmsman of the Birma.

It was the mate who first noticed something strange flitting about in the rigging. It was a clear, moonlight night and in the half-light the mate thought it was a ghost.

It was climbing out on the upper top-gallant yard-arm—a silent, white figure that moved and acted like a man.

At first, the mate thought he might be creating that figure in his own imagination.

Part of the main upper top-gallant sail had broken loose and was flapping and clapping in the wind, and the mate wasn't quite sure but the figure he thought he saw was just another bit of flapping sail-cloth.

He called the attention of the helmsman to the thing, and asked him what he thought of it.

An "Angel" Walks the Good Ship Birma's Rigging.

"Looks like an angel to me, Mr. Mate—or maybe a nymph," said the helmsman.

Together they stood and stared at the thing, until they were interrupted by the approach of the skipper. And the skipper it was who solved the problem. He peered up at the top-gallant yard-arm, at the flapping sail end, and at the white thing that looked like a man, and began barking orders.

"Mr. Mate," he snapped, "we have a sleepwalker to do with. I've seen this once before. Send a couple of men aloft and have them strictly understand that they must approach that boy as quietly as possible. If they don't, he'll wake up, lose his head, and drop."

Two seamen had already started up the mast, moving as quietly as they could in their effort to save the lad who was doomed to certain death if he woke up, when, to their horror, they saw him climbing out to the end of the yard.

They worked their way to that yard as rapidly as possible—stopped to make fast the violently whipping flap of canvas lest it get in the way of the rescue.

Then, while they were working, a sudden gust of wind caught in the small end of the sail cloth. It whipped violently, gave a loud, thundering clap, and the report woke the sleepwalker. He jerked up suddenly, lost his hold and fell from the yard.

The first thing Dick Malmberg remembers is waking up at a loud, cracking noise and finding himself high in the air, perched on the very end of a yard-arm.

Dick Wakes Up to Find a Fine Predicament.

The shock of the awakening brought him upright with a jerk. He lost his hold and tumbled backward. And in that one fleeting moment he went through an agony of surprise and fear.

He could hardly believe that the thing happening to him was possible. Yet, in his heart, he knew it was.

He clutched frantically at the yard as he went past it, missed, and gave up hope.

His fate now, he knew, was to crash to the deck and be crushed to death by the weight of his own hurtling body.

Miracle of Canvas Saves This Seaman's Life.

He saw himself lying on the deck, broken and bleeding, his smashed body making an ugly red smear on the white hoystoned planking.

Then, almost before he had started, he felt his fall being arrested—found himself floundering around in a sea of something that was hard and rough and white.

It was a moment or two before he could collect his senses. Then he realized what had happened. Instead of falling to the deck, he had dropped into the bag formed by the half-secured piece of flapping sail.

He was safe and sound, in an improvised cradle, not three feet from the point where he had started falling.

Strong hands grabbed his legs then as the two seamen pulled him out and began carrying him down the rigging. He reached the deck shivering, weeping, and stark naked—owing his life to the keen understanding and quick thinking of the skipper of his ship.

District of Columbia's Leap Year Law Is Broad

Leap year is an institution established by law in the District of Columbia, one of the oldest sections of the District code being devoted to the method to be employed in determining which are leap years "in all times coming."

It is set forth in the code that "the several years of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred, one thousand nine hundred, two thousand one hundred, two thousand two hundred, two thousand three hundred, or any other hundredth years of our Lord, which shall happen in time to come, except only every fourth hundredth year of our Lord, whereof the year of our Lord two thousand shall be the first, shall not be esteemed or taken to be bissextile or leap years, but shall be taken to be common years, consisting of three hundred and sixty-five days and no more; and that the years of our Lord two thousand, two thousand four hundred, two thousand eight hundred, and every fourth hundred year of our Lord, from the said year of our Lord two thousand, inclusive, and also all other years of our Lord, which by the Julian calendar are esteemed to be bissextile or leap years, shall for the future, and in all times to come, be esteemed and taken to be bissextile or leap years, consisting of 366 days, in the same sort and manner as was used under the Julian calendar."—Washington Star.

Rubbing the Eyes a Dangerous Practice

Mascara, eye shadow and brow pencil if judiciously applied spell glamor, but they're not the whole story when the eye question comes up—as it does every time you look in the mirror.

Eyes can be dusty, tired, weary and reddened. Then, no matter how delicately you frame your eyes, the picture is spoiled.

When the eyes feel and look all blurry, a few drops of lotion help to soothe and refresh them.

A lotion has no strengthening effect—go to a good oculist if you feel in need of that—but it does lessen the danger of eye infection because it removes irritating particles, and it's safe to use. Speaking of safety—if you're fond of your eyes, don't rub them. Rubbing your
