INCONSISTENCY IN A HIGH PLACE, THE SUPREME COURT

One of the chief contentions raised by the Government in the AAA case was that processing taxes must be considered by the courts as a proper exercise of the taxing power—without reference to the use made of the money so raised.

"The taxes as taxes," said the Government's brief, "being valid, the respondents have no standing to question the uses made by Congress of the revenues derived therefrom."

Mr. Justice Roberts and the majority declined to accept this contention. "The exception, the majority opinion said, "cannot be wrested out of its setting, and legalized by ignoring its purpose as a mere instrumentality for bringing about a desired end. To do this would be to shut our eyes to what all others than we can see and understand."

But the court in 1928, when the constitutionality of protective tariffs first came before it, did shut its eyes, did wreat it from its setting, did ignore its purpose, in order to uphold the validity of tariffs. A unanimous court there ruled—

So long as the motive of Congress and the effect of the legislative action are to secure revenue for the benefit of the general government, the existence of other motives in the selection of the subject of taxes cannot invalidate Congressional action.

The fact that Congress declares that one of its motives in fixing the rates of duty is so to fix them that they shall encourage the industries of this country cannot invalidate a revenue act so framed.

The fact is that the court regards the taxing power in one way when it suits its purpose, and in another way when it doesn't.

Of the nine Justices who voted unanimously in 1928 to uphold a tax to help manufacturers, six still sit as Justices and four of them voted in 1935 against a tax to help farmers.

Two of them, Brandeis and Stone, were consistent enough to vote for AAA.

The court has thus chosen to shut its eyes to the purpose of the tax and upheld the taxing power in the case of tariff taxes to help manufacturers, taxes to drive colored oleomargarine out of the market, taxes to encourage the building of yachts here instead of abroad.

In each of these cases the court said it had no authority to look beyond the tax to its purposes.

But when the Federal Government sought to end child labor by the use of a tax in interstate commerce, and when it sought to help farmers by a tax on the processing of certain basic agricultural commodities, the court reversed its own rule and declined to uphold the tax where it disapproved of the purpose for which it was imposed.

Yet the majority in the AAA case says that "This court neither approves nor condemns any legislative policy. Its delicate and difficult office is to ascertain and declare whether the legislation is in accordance with, or in contravention of, the provisions of the Constitution."

In less lofty circles, that would be called inconsistency.

CHRISTMAS SEALS AT WORK

We owe the Christmas Seal idea to the inspiration of a Danish postal clerk, Einar Holboell. In 1903 he interested his government in the idea of a sale of stamps to build a hospital for tuberculous children.

The sum collected on the sale of stamps in Centre Hall was $28.50, which is about the same amount collected a year ago. All of these funds will be used for the benefit of children in the grade schools in providing dental service.

Dr. H. R. White, during the past few years, has been performing the dental work, although the contributions for the cause are far short of adequate pay for the service rendered. The community is fortunate in having a dentist willing to contribute so liberally.
