Congregations are afforded large freedom in effecting their organization and managing their own affairs.

There will be only two judicatories Church: Synods and the General Synod. A synod will be constituted of ministers and lay representatives of the congregations and take the place of the Classis and Synod in the Church, It will meet twice a year.

A new departure is the grouping of synods into areas. The areas have no legislative functions but are constituted simply for efficiency in promoting the work of the Church and in placing of pastors.
