VOTE INDICATES F. D. R. STRENGTH IN FARM BELT

The Middle West is still for Roosevelt.

On the basis of returns from the Illinois and Nebraska primary elections, the conclusion became general throughout the Capitol that the president is as strong, if not stronger, in the farm belt than he was four years ago.

Although the White House refused to comment on the news that the President, even though unopposed, polled a vastly larger vote in both States than all the Republican candidates combined, sources close to him revealed that he was "highly elated."

Democratic leaders said the vote cast for the President could be regarded only as a sweeping endorsement of the New Deal and its policies. The Roosevelt totals in both States far exceeded expectations.

SCOTIA MINER, 88, LEAVES ESTATE OF OVER MILLION

Daniel M. Clemson, who started life as a humble workman in the Scotia mines of Centre county and became a steel magnate, left an estate of $1,000,000 and upwards, according to his will filed for probate.

Mr. Clemson died at his home in Pittsburgh, April 7th, at the age of 83 years. His wife, Mrs. Catherine Miller Clemson, and his son by a former marriage, Richard E. Clemson, share equally in 90 per cent of the estate. A niece, Grace Dale, was granted a trust fund of $50,000. Ten per cent of the estate was set aside for relatives, and servants. Clemson stated in his will that during his life he had made adequate provision for his son John G. Clemson and the latter's wife and therefore made no bequests to either.

The writer well recalls when young Clemson was first taken under the wing of the steel magnate, Andrew Carnegie. Great predictions were made of the outcome, but none were too liberal. Clemson rose rapidly, later becoming general superintendent of the Carnegie Natural Gas company and finally a partner of the famous steel manufacturer. He was active in many philanthropic affairs and in the activities of the Presbyterian church.

THE NEW GAS SERVICE FOR THIS TOWN AND VICINITY

Farm and Town Homes May Have Service.—Individual Tanks Will Hold Eight Months' Supply for Average Family.

The Atlantic States Gas Company, whose Mid-Penn division is making city gas service available to farm and town homes in the vicinity of Centre Hall, has just concluded a 2-day sales conference of zone supervisors under the direction of Harry B. Coyle, district manager, at Lewis-town.

An active advertising and selling campaign will be started immediately by the company, with its representatives calling upon residents of this district whose homes are not accessible to gas pipe lines. All of the zone supervisors are local people and other departments of the company in this district will employ residents of this district.

Col. George A. Burrell and Byron B. Stroud, operating managers of the company, and other officials from New York, attended the sales conference.

The first meal to be prepared in this section of the State by the Atlantic States system of gas service was served at the conference in the Coleman Hotel under the direction of Mrs. Maude E. Miner, the company's home service expert from New York, who will conduct a series of cooking schools in this vicinity.

The company's system supplies gas by means of individual underground tanks which hold enough gas to supply the average family for eight months. The company keeps the tanks filled free of charge and customers do not pay for the gas used until after it is used. A standard gas meter in each home records consumption.

The territory to be served by the Mid-Penn division extends from Roaring Springs, Hollidaysburg and Phillipsburg on the west, to the Susquehanna river on the east, and from Mill Hall on the north to Shippensburg and Mechanicsburg on the south.

Appliance display stores and offices will be opened in six towns in this area. A location for the Lewis-town store has been selected at 137 East Market street. A Service Centre, where reserve supplies of gas will be kept, as well as a fleet of delivery service trucks and stocks of appliances, is to be located in Lewis-town and is now under construction.

The honors list for the junior class at the Pennsylvania State College was announced a few days ago by Wm. S. Hoffman, registrar of the College. It includes scholastic standings to the end of the first semester of this year. Seven Centre county students are included in the listings.

CALIFORNIA ACCOUNTANTS SOLVE FLY LEG PUZZLE

A fly's broken leg caused auditors in the California State relief office a lot of money. The books had been six cents out of balance for a week and nobody could find the error. Help was called in.
Finally the accidental flick of a finger dislodged part of a fly's leg from above a number 1, which had been taken for a 7.
A fly sitting on a column of figures has often made $100 look like $1.00, but it didn't need to tear its leg off to do it.

FOREST FIRE WARDENS IN PENN DIS, ASK YOUR AID

As the season for forest fires in Penn district approaches, the statement of Forester Paul H. Mulford, Millroy, that "every citizen can assist in guarding against fires, if he will merely report promptly all appearances of forest fires to local warden, tower or district office," is important.

Each fire tower in Penn district is adequately equipped to handle every fire reported if done so in time. Men are kept on constant watch over the vast forest area in Centre and Millin counties for any fire which might start from a lighted cigarette or from a camp fire. But since it is hard to detect a forest fire on a busy day from the towers, a prompt report by individuals may save your timberland as well as your neighbor's.

Last year, Forest Ranger John Meeker reports there were no fires in the Penn district. The year before, however, the estimated damage done by fires in the same district was higher than normal.

There are thirty-three wardens in Centre county, each having a fire crew of about twenty men. These men are available at all times and are expected to respond to calls from their wardens. Their wages vary from 20 cents to 30 cents per hour. Any one desiring to join a fire crew may do so by getting in touch with the local warden.

The following men are your Penn District wardens in this locality and are at your service:

Centre Hall—Richard Brooks, 55R2; Job, Bubb, 183R4; John Knarr, 7R3; Harry McClellan, 18R24; Will McClintic, 72R14; John Meeker, 5R4; Edward Sweetwood, 5R13.

Spring Mills—Miles Brossler, 22R12; Elmer Foust, 6R4; Arthur Lee, 33R2; Clarence Musser, 9R3; John Smith, 5R13; L. L. Weaver, 2R23.

Zion—Leslie Detrick, 622; Daniel Kern, 2221; Guy Nolan, 91911.
