First Settlers of This Place in Dispute.—It has been a matter of dispute among authorities as to who were the first settlers at Spring Mills. Previous to 1800 there was built a mill just below the big spring. This mill was operated by Jacob Maize, who in 1812 moved to Millburg.

A Mrs. Allison, the mother of Arch-Rald Allison, lived along the main road at that time and kept the hotel. There was also a blacksmith shop and a log school house, the windows of which we are told, were John Blinn's Democratic Press, greased with hog's lard to make them transparent.

The old mills were replaced by new and larger ones as their amount of work increased. A saw mill was erected at an early date just below the present dam. It was this mill that cut the lumber for the construction of the majority of the buildings of the town.

Near the town is located a large spring, the depth of which has never been known. It was from this spring and the mills located here that the name of the town was derived. The railroad station has been given the name of Rising Springs.

The Methodist Episcopal church of Spring Mills was organized in 1836 while the organization of the Presbyterian sect dates back to the 1790's. The Lutheran church was founded near the close of the last century. The Evangelicals organized a few years later, and the Reformed church was built in 1891.

FARM CALENDAR.

Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

IMPROVE DAMAGED SEEDING.—New clover and grass seeding which has suffered from heat and drought may be improved this month by sowing additional seed on the thin spots or by discing the stubble and reseeding completely. Medium red clover, alsike clover, and timothy are best. The cultipacker will help to firm the seedbed.

CHANGES MADE IN RULES.—Two important changes have been made in the rules governing exhibits of dairy cattle at the Penna. Farm Show. One deals with the requirements on freedom from Bang's disease and the other relates to the base date for computing the ages of show cattle.

FARM PUBLICATIONS ISSUED.—Sixteen new farm publications have been issued recently by the Experiment Station Service of the Penna. State College. A list of all available agricultural publications can be obtained by writing to the Mailing Room, Agricultural Building, State College, Pa.

TO HAVE FIELD DAY.—Vegetable growers will have a field day at the Penna. State College Thursday, August 20. Experiments in the breeding of vegetable strains and varieties.
