Archway and Road Building

Unlike the archway on Route 322 at the big fill in Seven Mountains, the one near the Hosterman farm east of Penn Hall, will have a reinforced concrete bottom, giving the water passing through it a smooth surface on which to flow. Otherwise the two archways will be similar in construction. Pouring concrete for the footings and creek bed was begun last week. Batches are made up at the quarry near Milroy and trucked over the mountain. The trucks are driven onto an elevated platform, where the truckload of stone, sand and cement is dumped into a Raw-Nox mixer built on a truck. The cylinder into which the mix is dumped is closed and as the truck travels to its destination the cylinder revolves, thoroughly mixing the material.

At the Salem Reformed church, for the entire width of the property, a cut of between four and five feet was made, which without making provision would eliminate all parking space along the roadway. To provide parking accommodations the entire width of the right-of-way will be cut to the road level, and in addition about ten feet of the church property will also be cut to the same level. This will afford about the same parking space as was formerly available.

Mrs. Haney, wife of Harry Haney, of Mifflintown, is recovering from a broken rib. The fracture is the result of a recent fall down a cellarway.

A Kitchen Has Its Face Lifted

BEFORE--

The old inconvenient kitchen where equipment was placed without any regard to the number of steps it would take to prepare a meal. The refrigerator was out in the pantry.

AFTER--

The new kitchen has the ideal U-shaped arrangement which experts agree is most efficient. It is well lighted, and there is plenty of storage space. The color scheme is a pleasingly crisp one of green and white with red accents.

Becomes Cheerful Efficient Work Room

By Louise Brown

This kitchen in a Mt. Pleasant home has taken a new lease on life. The old awkwardly arranged, drab room has become an efficient workshop, sparkling with color.

The family who "put up with" this kitchen had felt for some time that something ought to be done about it. Although they had both an electric range and refrigerator to help make work easier, the kitchen was so poorly planned that many needless steps had to be taken in preparing a meal.

The refrigerator doesn't show in the above photograph because it was way back in a pantry, which any housewife knows means more steps. Don't think, however, that this kitchen was below normal, for, in fact, it was actually more convenient than the majority of kitchens now in use.

Suppose you were working in such a kitchen and wanted to make a cake. You go to the refrigerator for butter and eggs and take them to your work table. Another glance at the recipe, and you find you've forgotten the milk. Back to the refrigerator you go. Then perhaps you want a little lemon juice for flavoring—so you trot back again to the refrigerator. And so it goes—steps and more steps!

Another drawback to this kitchen was its lack of cupboard space—always an annoyance to the housewife. The sink was small and was placed in a corner which didn't leave much room for working—and the only light source in the kitchen was a bulb hung on a drop cord in the center of the room, insufficiently shaded by a glass shade that was open at the bottom.

New Kitchen Planned

When the family set to work to plan a new kitchen they wanted to overcome all the bad features of the old one. It was found that by shifting the door to the dining room, the ideal U-shaped arrangement of the equipment could be achieved. The refrigerator was moved in from the pantry to stand near the back door where it would be handy for supplies as they were brought in. A cabinet was placed along side to complete the preparation center.

The sink was placed in the center under the windows for cheerful light and a view while working there.

On the other "leg" of the U, more cabinets and a new cabinet-type electric range made up the cooking and serving center near the dining room door where it would be most convenient. A large utility cabinet for cleaning implements and so on, completed that side of the kitchen. As you can see there are plenty of both base and upper cabinets for storage space for pots, and pans, dishes, utensils and food supplies.

Gay Color Scheme

The bright color scheme of the new kitchen gives the room its charm. The cabinets are white to match the main piece of equipment. The composition tile which covers both walls and ceiling is a soft light green. The linoleum is green and white, the work tops black—and to add verve and dash, the small shelves, the tapes on the venetian blinds, and the ruffled valance are a brilliant red.

Lighting

Lighting was considered as a definite part of the remodeling—since it makes the room more cheerful on dark days and helps make tasks easier. A recessed lighting fixture covered with a piece of frosted diffusing glass was installed over the sink. Tubular bracket lights, which don't show in the photograph, were placed above the work counters. And of course, there was a glass enclosed ceiling unit in the center of the room for general illumination.

Every member of the family enjoys this pleasant new kitchen where everything is so shining and bright and every piece of equipment is placed to save time—and needless steps.
