DEMOCRATS WIN MOST OF GUBERNATORIAL CONTESTS
Democrats captured at least 12 of the 33 governorships at stake and were leading for 13 more as the election returns rapidly neared completion.
Republicans were victorious in two states—Vermont and New Hampshire—and were leading in three others—Iowa, North Dakota and South Dakota.
President Roosevelt's coast-to-coast sweep apparently assured Democratic gubernatorial triumphs in West Virginia, Connecticut, Delaware, Tennessee, Florida, Illinois, New York, Texas, Georgia, Rhode Island, Idaho, Ohio, Washington and Michigan.
Democrats also were riding well to the fore in Arizona, Arkansas, Indiana, Kansas, Massachusetts, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Carolina, Utah, and Washington.
Governor Philip LaFollette of Wisconsin had a substantial lead for reelection on the Progressive ticket, and in Minnesota Elmer Benson, Farmer-Laborite who supported the New Deal was far in advance of the Republican opponent. There was no Democratic candidate for the office.

Rev. J. M. Kirkpatrick, who assisted at the funeral services, read the following:

Compensation
I'd like to think when life is done That I had filled a needed post That here and there I'd paid my fare With more than idle talk and boast; That I had taken gifts divine, The breath of life and manhood fine. And tried to use them now and then In service for my fellowmen.
I'd hate to think when life is thru That I had lived my round of years A useless kind, that leaves behind No record in this vale of tears; That I had wasted all my days By treading only selfish ways; And that this world would be the same If it had never known my name.
I'd hate to think that here and there When I am gone, there shall remain A happier spot that might have not Existed had I toiled for gain; That some one's cheery voice and smile Shall prove that I had been worth while; That I had paid with something fine My debt to God for life divine.

Bread In One-Third The Usual Time With Modern Electric Appliances

By Louise Brown
Did anything ever taste better when you used to hurry home from school than a slice of home-made bread, still warm from the oven, with butter and jelly on it? Of course, being grown up doesn't mean you've lost your fondness for it.

Almost every family has a special weakness for homemade bread. But very few housewives want to bother with bread making—and we can't blame them, for the usual method (the same one our mothers used) is a rather lengthy process. However, cooking methods are rapidly undergoing many changes for the better, due largely to dependable and time-saving electric conveniences. Bread making is one of these processes that is being simplified—now it is actually possible to have the finished loaf in about two hours from the time you start to assemble the ingredients! With a very little practice, even the most inexperienced baker can prepare a grand loaf of bread. The secret, if you can call it that, is in the use of the electric mixer in mixing the dough, and the electric range or electric roaster for baking.

BREAD
1 1/2 cups milk
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons shortening
2 cakes compressed yeast
2 tablespoons warm water
5 cups flour (general purpose)

By combining all the ingredients with the mixer, the long kneading process, which we have always thought so necessary, is eliminated. With a little practice in handling the dough can be mixed, the bread shaped and in the pans within about fifteen minutes from the time you start so that the lengthy process of allowing the dough to rise, of punching it down, shaping the loaves and allowing them to rise again, can be ignored. After the dough is mixed, shaped and in the pans, it is placed in either the electric range or roaster, which has been slightly heated and so acts as a "proofing box" very much as the ones the commercial bakers use. Although the heat is only turned on for a minute, the heavy insulation holds sufficient heat in the oven or roaster to cause the dough to rise properly.

Assemble and measure all ingredients and sift flour. Scald the milk, add the salt, sugar and shortening and cool to lukewarm. Crumble yeast and soften in 2 table-spoons of warm water. Place large mixing bowl or revolving platform of mixer. Pour lukewarm milk mixture into bowl and add softened yeast. Using Medium speed of the electric mixer, add 2 1/2 cups flour. Mix thoroughly about 2 minutes. Then increase speed to High and add the remainder of the flour. Beat 4 minutes. As the dough becomes stiffer, it may climb the shaft of the blades on the mixer. In this case use a rubber spatula to push it down on the blades. Turn dough out on to a floured canvas and divide into two parts. Shape it quickly into loaves, but do not knead.

At the end a 25 to 45-minute rising period, the dough has doubled in bulk and is ready to make. You just switch the current on again in the range or roaster, and in an hour you have a beautifully browned, crusty loaf of bread. Just think of it! With a very little practice with this method, you can make as good bread as any Mother ever baked—and in less than one-third of the time.

To bake in the electric roaster, turn the heat control to 425 degrees F. for one minute, keeping the cover on the roaster. Disconnect the roaster, place the pans of bread in the roaster and allow to remain in covered roaster for 25 minutes. Then turn current on and bake bread for 1 hour at 400 degrees F.
If the bread is baked in the electric oven, turn switch to Bake for one minute, keeping the oven door closed. Place bread in the oven and turn switch off. Let bread rise 45 minutes, then turn switch to Bake and bake 1 hour at 400 degrees F.

The dependable temperature control of the electric range or roaster makes a golden brown, crusty loaf of bread a certainty.
