FARM CALENDAR.

Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture
Grade Housed Pullets.—It is a poor practice to place all pullets regardless of stage of maturity in the same pen. It pays to sort them into three grades: Those ready to lay, the second or medium grade pullets, and the smaller, slow-maturing pullets. Pullets of low vitality or those showing deformities should be culled out.
Improve Horse Growing.—Gold Medal Colt Clubs are encouraging the production of good horses. These clubs teach how to train, feed, and develop good draft horses. So far this year 299 colts have been weighed in for twenty clubs in sixteen counties.
Mulch Strawberries.—When the plied to the strawberry bed. Wheat ground is frozen, mulch can be applied. Whatever the material used, it should be free from grain, grass and weed seeds.
Pastures Need Rest.—Good management of permanent pastures calls for resting the grass late in the season, allowing it to obtain a fairly good growth before winter begins. This extra growth helps winter the plants, affords some extra cover, and gives the plants food reserves for early growth in the spring.
Cool Cream Whips Best.—Temperature plays an important part in whipping cream. Generally, to insure good results, low but tart content creams should be whipped at a temperature not greater than 45 degrees and high buttermilk content creams should be whipped at not more than 50 degrees.
Cull Out Poor Cows.—Low-producing cows and heifers from such cows should not be carried through the winter. Dispose of them now and use the feed for more profitable purposes, say Penn State dairy specialists.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS FOR ALL ELIGIBLES IN PENNSYLVANIA

Pennsylvania will be able to give old-age pensions to all persons, eligible under the law, through assistance from the federal social security act, according to a paper filed in the Dauphin county court on Friday by the State Department of Justice.
The information was set forth in the answer of Welfare Secretary John D. Pennington to a suit in equity, filed on behalf of Mary L. Poley, Montgomery county, which charged that the administration of old-age assistance in the State is in violation of the constitution.
The plaintiff contended that funds should be issued pro-rata to all eligibles and not on the basis of "first-come, first served." She said she had been refused a pension in Montgomery county "because there was not enough money to go around."
Pennington's answer denied that she could have been refused assistance on that basis since her application, filed Oct. 21, 1935, had not been investigated. He also denied the plaintiff's accusation that there was not enough money to provide assistance for all needy aged persons.
Pennsylvania received the first federal funds, $3,075,979, for old age assistance Sept. 29, and the Welfare Department began immediately to add eligible cases to the rolls as fast as applications could be investigated properly and approved. There are approximately 95,000 persons 70 years of age, who are eligible. More than 50,000 already are being paid, the department said.
