

POLITICAL PARTIES FILE EXPENSE ACCOUNTS IN CENTRE

Centre county Democratic and Republican committee treasurers last week filed expense accounts with the county prothonotary.

The accounts show the Democratic expenditures $4,796.07, and contributions $4,475.91, making a deficit of $314.16.

The Republican account reveals $5,808.00 contributed to its fund, $4,394.51 expended, leaving a surplus of $413.49.

Expenses for the Democratic campaign as filed by Treasurer Earl S. Orr are listed as follows: to committees, $2,050.00; salaries for headquarters, expenses, $547.78; making voting lists, $100.00; rent, phone, light, $225.00; to treasurer of Democratic committee, $66; printing, postage, advertising, $422.39; picnics, rallies, parades, bands, entertainment, etc., $807.70; furniture for headquarters, $47.00; total, $4790.07.

An itemized report submitted by Republican Committee Treasurer Robert C. Thompson of Bellefonte is as follows: voting list supplies and flowers for Clarence Rine, Bellefonte ward chairman who died shortly before election, $180.00; expenses relative to CCC registration, $25.87; bus hire for bands, $30.00; rents, telephone, telegraph, light, and paint, $915.02; bands, sound service and radio, $401.34; expenses of rallies, $769.61; committees, $1,611.61; committeeswomen, $455; total, $4,394.51. Advertising for 1933-36, $332.50.

FARM CALENDAR.

Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

Decorate the Home—Live plants and flowers can be used for winter decorations in the home. Bouquets of dried flowers and berry-bearing plants also may be used. Branches of pine, spruce, or arbor-vitae are attractive when set off with scarlet berries.

Gardens Are Valuable—There were 133 garden demonstrations in 34 Pennsylvania counties this year. These gardens averaged one-fourth of an acre and the average value of products was $123.76. About 25 different kinds of vegetables were grown in each garden.

Try New Varieties—When new varieties of small fruits become available it is a good plan to try them on a small scale rather than plant large areas immediately. Comparison with the most satisfactory old varieties is a good way to learn about the new kinds.

Leads in Proving—Pennsylvania leads in the number of dairy sires proved during the first nine months this year. Of the 848 sires proved in the United States during this time 343 were in Pennsylvania. Five or more comparisons of milk and butterfat records of daughters and dams are necessary in proving a sire.

Keep Farm Accounts—Farmers who have not kept accounts should plan now to get started. Taking an inventory is the first step and it does not take as long as some may think.

Produce Good Milk—Wiping the cows' udders with a damp cloth before milking, cooling milk quickly and scalding all milk utensils and strainers will reduce milk rejection at plant or factory.

Christmas Dinner Tables

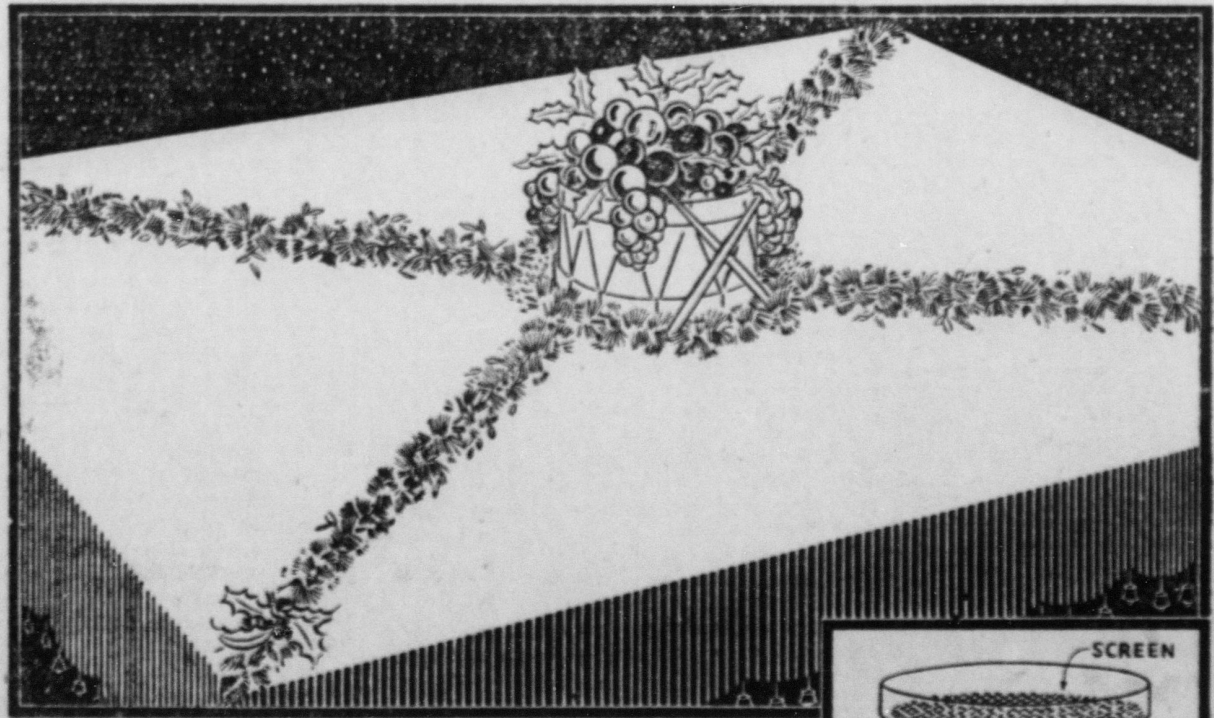

Gay Decorations Add To Enjoyment of Meal.

By Louise Brown
CHRISTMAS dinner—that meal of meals when family and friends gather round the literally groaning board! Today we have no fanfare of trumpets to announce the dinner—no procession entering the banquet hall triumphantly carrying the traditional boar's head and the steaming plum pudding. But we do have that famous American bird, the turkey; and while our pudding may not be as big, we venture to say it is tastier. And we can have gaily bedecked tables to make the meal a memorable one.

Christmas tables can be as beautiful or as whimsical as we please. Of course, fruits and flowers make a variety of charming centerpieces—and candles, either electric or wax, gleam across the snowy damask. With the clever gadgets that we can buy or make, we can contrive thrillingly unusual decorations, too. Christmas tree balls, pine cones, silver reindeer, angels, cellophane trees, tin jelly molds—these may sound quite miscellaneous, but they all have possibilities.

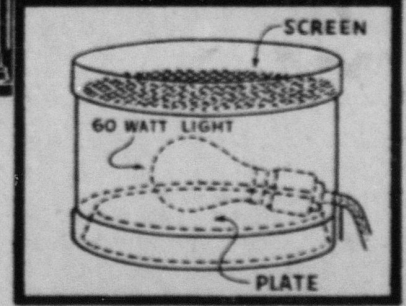

Toy Drum Centerpiece
The table sketched here is very effective and very easy to get together. It is simply a bright red toy drum from the dime store heaped with Christmas tree balls, some of which have been wired together to look like exotic bunches of grapes. A light is placed inside the drum to give the balls a lovely translucent glow. The drum is wreathed with ground pine and holly and sprays of greens are arranged diagonally to the four corners of the table.

The small diagram shows how it is done. A plate is placed upside

A Christmas centerpiece composed of a toy red drum heaped up with silver and blue tree balls that glow and sparkle from the light of a bulb concealed in the drum. Ground pine and holly are wreathed around the drum and sprays of it serve to cover the necessary wiring.

down in the center of the table and a 60-watt bulb is placed on it. The bottom of the drum is cut out so that it will fit down over the plate. Then the top of the drum is cut out and a piece of wire screen (any sort of screen will do) is put in place of it. This, of course, is to allow all the light to shine through. Christmas tree balls of various sizes are heaped on top of the screen, some of the small ones wired in clusters like grapes. These can be all colors, although silver and blue are very effective together. The bulb cord is brought out under the drum, or through a small slot in the side, and is hidden by the spray of ground pine.

Candle Decorations
Another clever table has as its centerpiece one of those sets of electric candles that come eight in a row. Set this on an oblong piece of mirror, cover the base of the candles and the edge of the mirror with moss or ground pine and place small skating figures on the glass. Miniature pine trees could be grouped around the edge of the "lake".

The same candles could also be used for another effective table decoration by placing a row of small kneeling angels on each side of the candles. These angels may be purchased in the stores, or you can make chubby, amusing ones from jelly molds and dime store gadgets with colored metallic paper wings and halos.

At Christmas time, we can be as gay as we like in the matter of a table cloth, too. Lace and linen are always lovely, or we can go modern and use cellophane cloth or paper sprinkled with stars, or even challis with small sprays of red and green flowers. The challis can be found in the yard goods departments in the stores. And you'll find many other materials there that can be made into practical and unusual table cloths—white dress linen, for instance, could be made up with bands or a scalloped border of bright red.
