FARM CALENDAR.

Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

Good Peas to Grow—Among the peas which have done well in extension demonstrations are early varieties, Little Marvel, Thomas Laxton, and World's Record; second early, Laxton's Progress and Hundredfold; main crop, Morse Market, Stride, and Dwarf Alderman; and late, tall varieties, Dark Poddled Telephone or Alderman, report vegetable gardening extension specialists of the Pennsylvania State College.

The Wet Spots—Much land in Pennsylvania contains wet areas on springy hillsides or high flats which need artificial drainage for good crop production. If the spring is late, wet spots will delay plowing and retard the corn crop, say Penn State agricultural engineers.

Prevent Feed Waste—One way of reducing feed costs in the poultry enterprise is by preventing waste. Plaster laths along the top sides of feeders help to prevent spilling, explain Pennsylvania State College poultry specialists. Overfilling of the feeders also should be avoided. Mash, at present prices, makes expensive litter.

Rural Chorus to Sing—The fifth annual rural chorus festival is scheduled for Farmers' Field Day at the Pennsylvania State College, June 10. County and district tournaments are planned to select the participating groups in the state event.

Plants Are Fragrant—Among the fragrant climbing vines, the Silver Mine, Clematis, Honeysuckle, Moon Flower, and Wisteria are exceptionally good. Be sure to have some fragrance in the garden, Penn State ornamental horticulturists urge.

Feed Silage to Steers—As it seems desirable to limit the amount of corn fed as grain, it is best during the first part of the feeding period to give the steers only silage and hay, with enough linseed oil cake or cottonseed meal to balance the ration.

CURTIS REIBER PREPARES MAP OF COLYER AND VICINITY

Curtis B. Reiber, of town, has taken great pains in preparing a map of Colyer and vicinity, showing all roads and defining the various fields on the numerous farms in that section, the farm houses and barns, school houses, churches, as well as other detail. Curtis is the manager of his father's real estate in that locality, the senior Mr. Reiber (W. A. Reiber) of Johnstown, owning a big section of the farm land about Colyer, which is also the land of his birth. The map shows great care in correctness of its make-up, and will doubtless be prized by the father of the young man.
