FARM CALENDAR. Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

Control Household Insects—Even with the best home-making methods, household insects sometimes become a problem. Flies often are a nuisance. The Penna. State College has two helpful publications which are free on request. Write for Circular 140, Fly Prevention, and Circular 150, Household Insects.

Prepare Rural Stages—Rural groups can fix up their own stages for dramatics, pageants, and entertainments. The work includes hanging curtains and drapes, according to the extension rural sociologist of the Penna. State College.

Space Vegetables Properly—Each vegetable crop requires proper spacing of plants to produce good yields of high quality, say Penn State vegetable gardeners. Ask your county agent for the correct spacing and depth of planting, as well as other useful information on gardening.

Many States Supply Eggs—Thirty states supplied eggs to Philadelphia last year. Only 17 per cent came from Pennsylvania farms. Only one-fourth of Philadelphia's eggs came from Pennsylvania and the nearby states of New York, New Jersey, Maryland, and Delaware, report Penn State agricultural economists.

Plant Potatoes Deeply—Unless potato seed is planted deeply, the plants will not develop properly, say Penn State agronomists. The tubers will set too close to the surface, will be subject to serious checks from heat and drought, and will push out to become sun-burned and frost-damaged.

Select Good Sires—Dairymen are urged to select young sires carefully and to keep these bulls in service, through exchange with neighbors of otherwise, until their actual value can be determined. A cooperative, bull association provides an economical way of doing this, Penn State dairy specialists assert.
