CLASS DAY FOR CLASS '37 CENTRE HALL-POTTER HIGH

(Held over from last week) The class of 1937 presented its Class Night exercises in the local high school auditorium, Tuesday evening, June 1, at 8 o'clock, to a large and appreciative audience.

The program was cast into three acts—

Act I.—Yesterday.
Act II.—Today.
Act III.—Tomorrow.

Act I. depicted scenes of childhood experience ably portrayed by the puppets in the scene "Our Shoes" and excerpts from the book of Memories.

The "Dance of Childhood" was ably executed by Miss Jolen Port from Millfintown, a niece of Dick W. Johnston.

Act II. began with a Flower Dance by the Junior girls and was followed by a class meeting presided over by Wm. A. Thomas.

The Junior class presented the Senior class with a basket of flowers. The presentation was formally made by Donald G. Faust, president of '35, and accepted by Wm. A. Thomas, president of '37.

The Achievement Roll was read by Donald Barger listed the outstanding achievement of each member of the class during his four years in school.

The quartet and trio furnished the music for this act and in song related some of the humorous experiences of some of the class members.

The statistical report of the class noted some of the idiosyncrasies of the class members as well as unusual physical characteristics.

The unusual presentation of gifts furnished fun and merriment for the class members and entertainment for the audience.

The unusual endowments of the class members were willed to the under-classes by Alfred S. Reish.

A fully equipped emergency cot was formally presented to Centre Hall-Potter high school by the class president Wm. A. Thomas, and accepted by the principal, J. F. Wetzel.

The act was closed by the class singing "Marching Along."

Act III. was opened by Miss Jolene Port again ably executing a dance of her own composition.

The future of the class was portrayed by Wm. A. Thomas and Geo. W. Homan by using their birthdays and the signs of the zodiac as a basis for the prediction.

The act was closed by the class singing the Fealty Song.

An Epitaph to the Senior class was humorized and characteristically presented by Dean H. Smith '40.

The Tiger, athletic and perfect attendance awards were presented in an assembly program Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock.

Capper's Farmer Editor Champions "Relief for the Farmer's Wife"

IN a recent interview, Mrs. Julia Kiene, Home Service Editor of Capper's Farmer, came out strongly for farm women's rights. Mrs. Kiene compared the working conditions of the modern farmer and his wife as follows. She said:

Mrs. Julia Kiene

"The farmer has a tractor to speed up his work. But his wife is still cooking with a clumsy, slow, old-fashioned stove that keeps her at her work twelve or sixteen hours a day, seven days a week. Her husband has a hay lifter to do his hay pitching for him. But she is still lifting heavy boilers of water from the top of the stove to her washtubs or sink. The modern farmer has the benefit of scientific methods to keep his crops and his livestock healthy. But his wife still has to struggle with old-fashioned, unsanitary cellar-bottom refrigeration for the family's food."

Although city housewives have long had the advantages of modern economical gas service for cooking, water heating and refrigeration, Mrs. Kiene pointed out that half the population of the United States still lives beyond the range of city gas service. In view of this, she considered the development of the new pipeless gas service for farms and towns a matter of historic significance. Mrs. Kiene said "women living in the Atlantic States Gas areas are fortunate, indeed, to have the opportunity to use this time-saving, labor-saving invention." She prophesied that with the advance of Atlantic States Gas, "the farmer's wife will take her rightful place beside her husband in a new life rich with promise of shorter hours, better working conditions and more leisure for 'the pursuit of happiness.'"
