NEW AEROPLANE SPECTACLE AT ALLENTOWN FAIR

Those who visit the great Allentown Fair, September 21, 22, 23, 24 and 25, will have an opportunity of seeing Les Kimris, who presents an extraordinary aeroplane revolving spectacle imported from France. Suspended ninety feet in midair, these birds on the wing offer one of the most thrilling and fascinating dare-devil exploits ever devised. They combine beauty with bravado.

The duo appeared in "Jumbo," Little Rose's extravaganza which had a long run at the Hippodrome in New York. Oursure to audiences in this country, they ascended to stardom overnight as a result of their work in that circus musical. Following their engagement with "Jumbo," they were signed to re-enact their roles in Mr. Rose's Fort Worth version of the revue where they again astounded audiences who came to witness Mr. Rose's Frontier Centennial production.

The Kimris achieved enviable reputations as Europe's most startling feat-creators, and in their two short years in this country have more than lived up to the marks they registered in the several countries of Europe, where they appeared in every one of the outstanding circuses, vaudeville theatres and music halls, indoor and outdoor.

Vera Kimri, a noted beauty, matches the work of her partner, as both swing dangerously while hanging from a wireplane-like rigging, executing hazardous gymnastics, back balancing and foot holds in their vast aerial repertoire.

Light for Sewing Comfort

Darning dark socks with dark thread requires more light than sewing on white goods with dark thread. Make sure the lamp you use by gives plenty of restful light.

By Louise Brown DID you know that sewing on dark goods with dark thread for any length of time uses more nervous energy than digging a ditch? Scientists who have made a study of the relationship of light and seeing, have proved that this is true by the use of instruments that record nervous tension. Dark thread on dark material—or light thread on light material—offers very little contrast so that the seeing task is a difficult one. Such a task requires far more light than, for example, sewing on dark material with white thread. Sewing is such an everyday task, especially darning and mending, that few women give much thought as to whether or not they have sufficient light to see by comfortably. They are often conscious of being annoyed at the job—they find themselves frown-
