Several other directors, who witnessed the accident, ran to his assistance and helped him out of the car and managed to extinguish the fire, but not until considerable damage had been done. A TRUE STATE COLLEGE

A note on the retirement of a veteran employe of Pennsylvania State College published a few days ago said that she had seen the school's attendance grow from 300 to 6,000. But this 6,000 does not represent, by any means, the scope of those who are at one time receiving the college's educational advantages. It is in its extension courses, which carry the work of the institution into all parts of the state, that its true character as a "state college"—a college of the people—is revealed.

The Extension News issued by the college gives, from time to time, hints of the volume of this extension work. The volume of the extension work of the School of Mineral Industries alone reports 4347 enrolled in its various curricula. Classes in mining include 1,907 working in 93 classes in 59 communities in 18 counties. Classes in metallurgy have enrolled 1,391 in 48 classes in 11 counties. Petroleum and natural gas engineering courses have 802 students in 34 classes in 10 counties.

Illustrative of other extension courses is that for industrial supervisors, of whom 2063 are taking training in classes throughout the state.

Such courses taught by extension teachers, other students who take studies by mail and the thousands who in the course of any year visit the college itself for special classes make of Pennsylvania State College an educational center the magnitude of which is not indicated by the number of those who pursue the regular courses of study within the college walls.

TOWNSHIP SUPERVISORS MEET IN ALTOONA, FEB. 8 AND 9

The Pennsylvania Association of Township Supervisors will meet in Altoona, February 8 and 9, to voice its views on legislation and problems affecting the smaller Pennsylvania communities.

The association said speakers would explain laws enacted in 1937 and "give some timely warning on other proposed legislation which will affect local officials."

Township officials joined with town and city officials recently in protesting provisions of the 44-hour work law. The township's petition declared duties of their workers "makes enforcement of the law a hardship."

FARM CALENDAR.

Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

New Publications Available—

Several new publications have been printed by the agricultural extension service of the Pennsylvania State College. These include Circular 189, "Selection of Layers and Breeders," Circular 192, "Vegetables in Your Diet," and Leaflet 59, "Salads." Revisions of Leaflet 26, "Fertilizing Farm Crops," and Leaflet 52, "Cover Crops for Farm Garden, and Orchard," also have been published. Ask your county agent or write to the Agricultural Mailing Room, State College, Pa., for copies.

Get Ready for Spring—Winter is not a period of idleness for the flower gardener and home grounds caretaker. There are many tasks which must be done and other jobs which are in preparation for the busy spring season say Penn State ornamental horticulturists.

Feed the Ewe Flock—Breeding ewes should gain in weight. Thrifty ewes avoid many troubles at lambing time. Legume hay such as alfalfa red clover, or soybean, is a splendid rouage for bred ewes. Corn silage or roots can be included for succulence, a desirable feature at this time of year, declare Penn State livestock specialists.

Seek Best Vegetables—To acquaint vegetable growers with the best strains in variety, demonstrations were conducted by the agricultural extension service of the Pennsylvania State College in 29 counties last year. Selections for these projects were made from detailed records of type and yield taken at the College agricultural experiment station.

Drinking Cups Pay—Individual drinking cups furnish the best system for watering cattle where water can be used in that way and the barn does not freeze. The increased production of milk soon pays the original cost, say Penn State dairymen.
