EARLE SPEAKS TO PENNA. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE Greeting members of the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce assembling for their twenty-first annual convention at Harrisburg during last week, Governor George H. Earle said: We are fortunate that in Pennsylvania we have not only been able to care for those in need, thereby sustaining our purchasing power and our markets, but also have been able to do so without levying taxes which would place us at a competitive disadvantage in comparison with other States.

California, New York, Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan, and Illinois, all have greater per capita State taxes than Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania's per capita tax is $21.80 or about six cents a day. Indiana, with $21.59, and New Jersey with $21.16, are the only large industrial States having lower rates, and they do not begin to offer the advantages to industry that Pennsylvania offers. The State's per capita debt is less than that of any other industrial State in the Union. That debt was inherited by this Administration and has not been increased a single dollar under this Administration. We are operating on a pay-as-you-go basis. The State's credit is the soundest it has ever been in history, so much so that we are enabled to borrow at 1-1/8 per cent on short-term paper.

Comparatively, business pays no more in total taxes in Pennsylvania than it pays in any other great industrial state, and in many instances less. We have no sales and use tax. We have no individual income tax. We have no tax on unincorporated business. We have no gross earnings tax. We have no general property tax. We have no severance tax. Our emergency tax levies are exactly equal to our relief appropriations. As they go down our emergency taxes will go down. We have no excuse for the fact that we have levied emergency taxes for relief. We had an obligation to meet, and we met it honestly. But we have never levied taxes in excess of demonstrated needs. We have not maintained emergency taxes where they were no longer needed. Only last year we reduced taxes and fees in the amount of $32,000,000, at the same time meeting our relief obligation.

Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue Lloyd C. McHenry will be at the court house Bellefonte, Friday and Saturday, where he will be available to any experiencing difficulty in compiling their income returns.

PENNSYLVANIA FARMER BOOSTS COUNTY 4-H CLUB

"The Pennsylvania Farmer" in its issue of February 26 shows a fine illustration of Miss Helen Homan and her pen of grand champion South-down sheep, shown at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show. The Four-H Club in Centre county is further boosted by E. H. Rohrbach in the "Farmer" when he says: When the judge, Peter C. MacKenzie, livestock superintendent at the Pennsylvania State College, moved Helen Homan's pen of pure-bred Southdown lambs into the grand-championship spot at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in January, it was the fourth time in five years that the coveted purple of the State Farm Show went to Centre county. Lamb club work started in Centre county twelve years ago. Since then the Four-H Club members from this county have shown five grand champion pens, seven reserve grand champion pens, and twenty brood champions.

Alice Foust was the first to bring home the high award. She did it in 1929 with a pen of Southdowns. With the prize and sales money from these she bought some pure-bred ewes and proceeded to raise her own lambs. In 1934 she repeated her triumph. Charles Harter was the next grand champion winner, also with a pen of Southdowns. At the 1935 Show Margaret Ross continued the three-year winning streak, this time with Shropshires. This year's winner, Helen Homan, is from near State College. Reserve grand championships were awarded to Jane Vial on Southdowns in 1928, Edward Bittner on Southdowns in 1930, Fred Luse on Shropshires in 1931, Charles Harter in both 1933 and 1934 on Hampshire, Richard Ross on Shropshires in 1935, and Helen Homan in Southdowns in 1936. In addition to the breed champions which went on to take grand and reserve honors, the following Centre county club members also topped the breed classes: Clarence Hoy on Hampshire in 1928 and 1929, Fred Luse on Shropshires in 1929, Leroy Bechtel on Hampshire and Alice Foust on Cheviots in 1932, Clarence Harter on Hampshire in 1937, and Daniel Stearns on Hampshire this year.

Lamb feeding club work also has made a distinct contribution to the sheep industry of Centre county, according to County Agent Ralph C. Blaney. He says: "Lamb club work has demonstrated the value of good breeding. It has influenced to a great extent the purchasing of pure-bred rams to head the flocks of 50 sheep owners in the county. This work also has been largely responsible for the establishment of eight pure-bred flocks in Centre county. The club members have demonstrated the value and methods of controlling sheep parasites, as well as good feeding and management practices." Blaney also credits the lamb feeding club program with advertising Four-H Club work in Centre county and calls it a contributing factor in increasing interest among boys and girls in other lines of Four-H Club activities.

PROPOSED CLINIC FOR STUDENT DEFECTIVE SPEECH The Centre Hall-Potter high school faculty is planning a clinic for pupils with defective speech. The clinic will be conducted by faculty members of the Pennsylvania State College from the department of speech. These men are all specialists in their line. They will examine the pupils who appear for the clinic, diagnose their difficulty, and suggest methods for treatment which will be the parents' responsibility to follow or reject. If the faculty can find twelve pupils in the district who will appear at the clinic the services will be free. Any patrons who are interested should inform the principal, J. P. Wetzel, and detailed arrangements will be made and the date, time and place announced later. Any pupils with speech defects in the borough or township are eligible. The schools solicit the cooperation of parents in this worthy undertaking. Sometimes very simple corrective exercises if religiously followed will entirely eradicate a very bad defect.

Matthew Goheen, a prominent Boalsburg citizen, has improved but little from the effects of a paralytic stroke suffered Tuesday of last week. He was seized with the attack after reaching his home from conveying school children to their homes. Mr. Goheen is a bit over 61 years old.

FARM CALENDAR. Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

Cull the Laying Flock. Rigorous culling of the laying flock at this time is the best way to keep it on a paying basis, say Penn State poultry specialists. By late winter and spring, in heavy laying flocks, pullets lacking normal stamina go out of production. This is indicated by shriveled comb, molting and shrunken abdomen. Make Convenient Cupboards--A man handy with tools can transform old cupboards into compact, handy and attractive ones. A few pieces of lumber, some nails, and carefully made plans are necessary, say home management specialists of the Pennsylvania State College.

Learn of Erosion--Soil erosion has affected more than half of the land area in Pennsylvania. Bulletin 354, "Soil Erosion Survey of Pennsylvania," outlines the work that is being done by various research agencies in an attempt to devise the most effective means for reducing further soil losses from erosion and for rebuilding those which have lost fertility. The bulletin is a Penna. State College publication. Add Plant Food--Penn State agronomists report that manure is a more complete fertilizer for farm crops when superphosphate is added. Scattering 1-2 to 2 pounds of superphosphate for each head of stock daily in gutters and on stable floors furnishes about 40 pounds to a ton of manure.

Make Plant Improvement--In plant breeding the scientists bring together good qualities from many sources to create new and better plants. The Pa. State College has made many contributions along this line. Prune Tree Correctly--In pruning the young apple trees, the leader should be on the windward side, say Penn State fruit specialists. Varying from this practice in windy locations will result in failure to produce a leader tree.
