A COLLECTION OF NEWSY HAPPENINGS AND PERSONALS FROM GREGG TWP.'S METROPOLIS.

Sophomores Lead in Attendance—The sophomore class in Gregg Township Vocational school had the best attendance record for the fifth period. The standing by classes:

First, Sophomore 94.9%
Tied for 2nd, Junior 92.6
Tied for 2nd, Freshman 92.6
Fourth place, Senior 85.6
Average for term to date 85.6

Further Work for Civic Club—Coincident with what our Civic organization has already achieved, a new venture should be considered, namely, a campaign to beautify Spring Mills—to clean up, repair, and paint properties. There should be a further movement in planting trees and shrubbery in street margins; also, trimming the old trees would be a wonderful improvement to our town. This in some other towns has become a WPA project. Beautifying the town should have the co-operation of every citizen.

Patients in the Hospital—George E. Auman, R. D. 2, Spring Mills, was admitted Tuesday, and George W. Harter, also R. D. 2, on Friday.

Mrs. Ruth Grove, daughter, Helen, Mrs. Mabel Smith and Bernice Smith were dinner guests in State College on Tuesday evening. They celebrated Helen Grove's birthday.

TWO SOLUTIONS TO "BEAUTY TABLE" LIGHTING

By Louise Brown
I DON'T need to remind you how annoying it is to try to apply make-up at a dressing table with the wrong kind of light. Perhaps the lamps are too low, or they have colored shades, so that unbecoming shadows and spotty high lights are thrown on your face. What poor tricks you play on your complexion under such lighting! One cheek generally is rouged more than the other and the powder is uneven. It doesn't matter how fine the cosmetics are, they haven't half a chance when applied under poor light.
But a dressing table becomes a "beauty table" when the lighting is properly planned. The idea, you know, is to light your face so that every curve of it is reflected softly with no false shadows or lines. Then your make-up will go on smoothly, giving you that look of good grooming which is important to the modern woman.
Selecting the Right Lamps
Vanity lamps are generally the favorite selections. These should be the tall, slim kind—tall enough to light the face of a person seated at the dressing table. The height will depend, of course, on the height of the vanity, or dresser, and whether you like to sit down, or stand up when applying make-up. Usually a lamp that is 18 inches high with a 6-inch shade and a 60-watt bulb gives satisfactory light.
Illustrated here are two other satisfactory types of vanity table lighting. The pin-it-up lamps have proved to be a very simple and inexpensive way of having sufficient light at the mirror. These can be installed just as easily as hanging a picture, are suitable for almost any type of dressing table, and can be hung at just the right height to light the face of a person seated at the table. Pin-it-ups with the diffusing cone should have 75-watt bulbs.
A Modern Touch
For a distinctly modern touch as well as efficient lighting, choose the new lumiline lamps. Place one of these on either side of the mirror as they are shown in the accompanying picture. Note how these elongated electric bulbs stand on a base, with a wire and plug to attach to a socket. They are portable, but they have a smart air of being part of the furniture.
And their light does plenty for a person. Imagine, for example, that we have a small light on either side of the dressing table that can be stretched like a rubber band. As it is extended, you'll notice how more and more of your face is lighted until, when the light is as long as the mirror, every bit of your face is smoothly reflected.
White Light Essential
Here are some important points to remember when choosing lamps for the dressing table. The shades

Simple, inexpensive pin-it-ups are one solution to lighting the dressing table. They add a charming touch as well as give good light.

When the light is as long as the mirror, as with the new lumiline lamps, every curve of the face is reflected clearly without false lines or shadows.

should give an even distribution of light and be dense enough to eliminate glare. Trying to match the shades to the color scheme of the bedroom often presents a problem. A pink or blue shade, for instance, will cast a light that distorts the color of rouge and powder, so that too much or too little may be applied.
White shades, or the white light of the lumiline lamp, will enable you to see your complexion in its true colors—as others see it later. And that's a help in looking your best!
