FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders from The Pennsylvania State College

New Silage Popular—Popularity of grass and legume silage in Pennsylvania has increased by leaps and bounds. Only 30 farmers put up this kind of silage in 1935, but last year the number was 250. Penn State dairy specialists report that many more farmers are making plans to ensile grass and legumes this summer.

Keep Litter Clean—A dry, deep litter should be kept in the brooder house, according to poultrymen of the Penna. State College. Shavings, crushed corn cobs, peat moss, sugar cane litter, sawdust, and cut straw are common types of litter.

Horses Are Used—Most Pennsylvania farmers are favorably situated to use and produce horses and mules. Feed usually is abundant and pastures can be made available for 6 to 8 months a year. Farms moderate size and diversified, favor the use of animal power. Penn State livestock specialists point out.

Male Birds Need Feed—Failure of the male birds to eat enough at the mash hoppers, or when grain is fed may cause them to become excessively thin during the breeding season. Penn State poultry specialists recommend placing some feeders on roosts or troughs on walls high enough for the males to reach but too high for the hens.

Fight the Flies—Fly time is coming. Circular 140, "Fly Prevention," an extension publication of the Penna. State College, tells how to control this pest. Ask your county agent or home economics representative for a copy, or write to the Agricultural Mailing Room, State College, Pa.

Crops to Ensilage—Almost any crop may be ensiled with success, say Penn State dairy specialists. Those tried by the Penna. dairymen include alfalfa, sweet clover, soybeans, red clover, mixed hay crops, timothy, green small grains, and combinations.

CENTRE COUNTY FARMERS

MAY INSURE 1939 WHEAT CROP Centre county wheat growers, as well as growers in every other county in the country may now assure themselves of from one-half to three-fourths of their average crop every year. This will be made available thru the all-risk insurance feature of the new Farm Act. The insurance protects against all natural hazards such as drought, flood, hail, wind, winterkill, lightning, tornado, insects and plant disease.

His first wife was Katie Miller, whom he married November 19, 1887. Following her death he married his present wife, the former Rosie Wolfe, who survives him with two sons: Floyd, of Binghamp, N. Y., and Harry, of Elmira, N. Y. Also surviving are two sisters, Mrs. George Ocker, and Mrs. Mary Guisewite, both of Harrisburg.
