FARM CALENDAR Timely Reminders from The Pennsylvania State College

Make Grass Silage—Grass and leuca silage is one of the best feeds for keeping up milk production during July and August when pasture is scarce, according to Penn State dairymen. By filling silos to one-third or one-half capacity, dairymen have a succulent feed for the summer. This enables them to use their silos the entire year.

Control Bean Beetles—The safest and most effective material to use for the control of Mexican bean beetles is rotenone. Penn State entomologists say that this material may be used in the form of either dust or spray.

Cut Pulpwood Now—Most wood for paper making is cut and peeled of its bark during May, June, July or August. The species of woods used include practically all the broad-leaved trees, the yellow pines, and spruces, according to Penn State foresters.

Produce Clean Seed—One way to have clean wheat for seed next fall is to pull the cockle, rye and garlic from an acre or two. This wheat can be handled separate from the other during harvesting, threshing, and storing, say Penn State agronomists.

Water Trees and Shrubs—Watering recently planted trees and shrubs is necessary during dry weather, according to Penn State ornamental horticulturists. Mulching to a depth of 1 or 2 inches with well-decomposed cow manure or peat moss is recommended.

Give Chicks Room—Avoid overcrowding chicks. Rather than have more than 250 in one group, divide the chicks into two lots, Penn State poultrymen urge.

Feed Dairy Heifers—Two to three pounds of grain per day is suggested by Penn State dairymen for heifers during the early part of the pasture season.

COLLEGE SUMMER SESSION SCHEDULES ANNOUNCED Dr. Lester K. Ade, Superintendent of Public Instruction, has announced the date on which the various teacher education institutions in the state will conduct their summer sessions. To accommodate the interests and needs of students, some colleges have arranged pre-session courses, regular session courses, and post-session courses.

SPANGLER.—N. B. Spangler, oldest member of the Centre county bar in both age and years of service, died of a heart attack as he was entering his home in Bellefonte, Thursday morning of last week. He had suffered from heart trouble for the past four years, being confined to his home for about nine months of that time, during the winter of 1935-1936. Recently, however, Mr. Spangler had been in fair health. On Thursday morning he took a ride in his car alone, the first time he had done so in about a year. He motored to Hahlersburg, and on his return was mounting the steps of his home when he fell over. He died before medical aid could arrive. Mrs. Spangler, about to leave for Lewistown, was summoned.

Just the day previous Mr. Spangler and his wife had spent a short time visiting friends in Centre Hall. Funeral services were held from his late home Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The Rev. C. He won high regard as a trial lawyer, and was for some time District Attorney of Centre county. In later years he formed a partnership with Ivan Walker, and within the last two years his legal firm was enlarged to include R. Paul Campbell, with whom he continued to practice after the election of Ivan Walker, to the bench of the Forty-Ninth Judicial District.
