TRAILER COOKING

Here's the last word in trailer comfort—an electric roaster has been added to the cooking equipment so that the trailerite can bake or broil a fresh-caught fish (or any other food) just as perfectly as at home.

By LOUISE BROWN
ARE YOU TRAVELING THIS SUMMER? If you are, here's a suggestion for solving the cooking problems. Take your electric roaster with you so that whenever it is possible to stop at a trailer camp where electricity is available, you can have a hot meal as easily as you would at home.

Roasters are so compact that they fit very neatly into the limited space of a trailer, and since the heat is controlled and the roasters well insulated, they don't heat up the cooking and dining quarters.

You can cook a complete hot meal in the roaster—the sort of food that tastes so good to outdoor appetites. Or you can use the broiler unit for hamburgers or frankfurters. You can even treat the family to a little home baking—a fresh cherry pie, for instance, or a pan of biscuits.

Since most trailerites are ardent fishermen, and most trails lead to some place where fish are plentiful, here are two suggestions for cooking fish in the roaster.

The kind of fish will probably depend on fisherman's luck! But here's a broiler method for lake trout, white fish, bass, or any other favorite.

BROILED FISH
Assemble broiler unit in the roaster according to directions given in the instruction book. Adjust rack to proper slide. Preheat broiler unit at least 5 to 10 minutes. Grease a shallow pan with butter or drippings. Lay fish, opened out, skin side down on greased pan. Season with salt, pepper and lemon juice and dot with butter. Place under broiler so that fish is about 2 inches away from broiler element. Broil 20 minutes without turning.

BAKED FISH DINNER
Baked Fillet of Flounder
Green Beans Steamed Potatoes
Baked Peaches

Baked Fillet of Flounder
3 flounder fillets
¼ cup melted butter
1 tablespoon onion, chopped fine
2 cups dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
6 slices bacon

Make dressing with butter, onion, crumbs, salt and pepper. Cut fillets in half, place in large oiled baking dish of roaster. Cover with dressing and place bacon strips over the top.

Steamed Vegetables
Green beans 1 teaspoon salt
Potatoes ¼ cup water
Put potatoes in one end and green beans in the other end of one small covered baking pan of roaster, add salt and water.

Baked Peaches
Place layer of macaroon crumbs in buttered small pan. Over crumbs, put layer of sliced peaches. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and a dash of honey. Then add more crumbs and more peaches. Pour over all a small quantity of thin cream. Bake uncovered.

Place the three baking pans in the cold roaster, set thermostat to 350° F. and bake 1½ hours.
