ELECTRIC COOKING SETS NEW LOW-COST RECORD ★

TESTS IN 100 HOMES SHOW COST HAS TAKEN ANOTHER DROP DURING THE PAST YEAR

★ THE cost of cooking electrically has been steadily coming down. More than a year ago West Penn Power Company advertised that the average cost was $2.20 a month. Then the figure dropped to about $2.

Recently the company made another check-up. Meters were installed in 100 homes, chosen at random, and the electricity used for cooking was separately measured over a 2-month period. The test disclosed that the trend of electric cooking cost is still downward, for the cost in those 100 home averaged less than $2 a month!

"BY THE WAY, FOLKS—"

"Check up on the electric method of water heating. It's automatic, attention-free—and puts an end to water heater troubles. Operates for only about 10c a day."
