Timely Reminders from The Pennsylvania State College

Following Right Practices—By taking grand championship honors both on sheep and swine at the 39th annual International Livestock Exposition held recently at Chicago, specialists in the animal husbandry department of the Pennsylvania State College proved conclusively that they are on the right track when it comes to breeding, fitting and showing based on present day standards. Growing Christmas Trees—A number of Pennsylvania Christmas tree growers are following a unique method of starting a second crop, report forestry specialists. Trees are cut off high enough above the ground to permit a few of the lower branches to remain on the stumps. These keep the root systems alive and in a year or two branches turn upwards. One of these is left to form a new tree.

Wheat or Corn—Both are good fattening cereals say Penn State poultrymen. They have about equal value per pound for putting on fat thru-out the body. Fat in the skin of dressed turkeys gives them an appearance of finished bloom and mellowness.

Repairing Farm Machinery—A few hours spent this winter in caring for machinery will save many hours and headaches next spring during the rush season, say agricultural engineers of the Pennsylvania State College.

DR. BEURY IN "RECORD" FORUM OF DEC. 15

In the Record Forum, in which "Who Is Philadelphia's Man of the Year" is discussed, Dr. Charles E. Beury has been nominated thus: Temple's Titan—Dr. Charles E. Beury, president of Temple University. No university in the land can boast as rapid a growth as the progress Temple has made in the last decade.

Since Dr. Beury's inauguration in 1926, the university has constructed the Sullivan Memorial Library, Mitten Hall, Conwell Hall, a $2,000,000 Medical School and spacious Temple Stadium. The university has acquired Oak Lane County Day School and the Stella Elkins Tyler School of Fine Arts. Not only this, she has obtained Class A rating for all the schools that make up the university—Joseph M. Garber, 3856 N. Marshall St.

To Help You Have A Merry Christmas

For many telephone operators, the twinkling lights of the switchboard will replace—for a few hours—the lights of the Christmas tree. Yet you will still find "a voice with a smile" when you lift your receiver. For your operator knows how much those Christmas calls can mean—to you and to those you call.

And so, on Christmas, as on every other day, we shall be happy to serve you. Low Night Rates will be in effect after seven Christmas Eve and all day Sunday and Monday.
