FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders from The Pennsylvania State College

Buying Garden Seeds—Because very little seed is needed when plants are started under favorable conditions in green houses, hotbeds, or in flats in the kitchen, it is advisable to purchase the best seeds obtainable, extension vegetable gardeners at the Pennsylvania State College believe.

Oiling the Harness—Many years can be added to the life of a harness by oiling it regularly at least once each year and repairing broken and worn parts, extension animal husbandmen at Penn State claim.

Seedling Diseases—Damping-off and other diseases of seedling plants can be controlled by growing them in clean sand, say plant pathologists at Penn State. Better germination, stronger plants and more efficient root systems are additional advantages.

Feeding Ewes—It is important that ewes be in good physical condition at the time their lambs are born, say extension animal husbandmen at Penn State. Exercise, a liberal ration, fresh water and salt available at all times are essential.

Helping the Birds—Placing a shock of fodder or several buckets of ear corn in a well-protected spot will aid pheasants and quail in going through the winter in excellent condition according to wildlife specialists at Penn State. Birds need to be supplied with food particularly during periods of inclement weather.

European Corn Borer—Damage from European corn borers has been reduced to a minimum in counties where farmers have carefully followed recommended control measures, extension entomologists at Penn State report.

Orvis Meyer, while cutting wood a few days ago, cut a gash in the left thumb.
