The tests are conducted through the cooperation of the State Tuberculosis Society and the State College Red Cross Chapter.

Rain and snow began falling on Saturday at about noon and continued throughout the night and Sunday. The fall of snow was from four to five inches, and the rainfall during the same period was heavy. Trees, telephone and electric power wires were heavily coated with ice, causing some of the wires to break. Shrubbery was bent to the ground with the heavy load of ice. Many small twigs broke under the weight. The result of the ice which continued its encasement of fruit buds from Saturday until Tuesday is problematical.

Too much fire in the smoke-house came close to starting a real conflagration at the John H. Burkholder farm home south of town. Mr. Burkholder was papering a room on the second floor of the dwelling house when he saw smoke rolling off the shingle roof of the smoke-house, and it was with much difficulty the year's supply of meat was removed before it became damaged beyond being fit for food. The fire was finally extinguished but not until the roof was destroyed. The building stood close to the main dwelling house—too close for a comfortable feeling while the flames were shooting up from it.
