FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders from The Penn'a State College School of Agriculture

Pullets Need Nests—When pullets start to lay on range they need nests. Failure to provide such equipment may result in cannibalism as the unprotected layers suffer from picking by their aggressive sisters. Penn State poultry specialists say that old egg cases or orange crates can be placed as nests at the rear of the range shelters if covers are provided to keep them from becoming wet.

Field Day Planned—A vegetable gardening and plant breeding field day is scheduled at the Pennsylvania State College for August 11. Tests of beans, cabbage celery peppers, edible soybeans, sweet corn, and tomatoes will be inspected. Some of these vegetables are in variety trials and others in breeding experiments.

Make Good Ice Cream—Home-made ice cream can be smooth and of good texture if careful freezing is practiced. Preparations of the freezing mixture and turning of good ice cream are important in making good ice cream. Circular 185, "Making Ice Cream at Home," available from your county agent or the Agricultural Mailing Room State College, gives detailed information.

New Lettuce Is Good—A new variety of head lettuce, Imperial 44 has produced the most uniform, solid heads of any variety tested at the Penna. State College Agricultural Experiment Station this year.

Control Potato Blight—Keep potato vines thoroughly covered with bordeaux mixture, 3 pounds of bluestone and 8 pounds of lime in 100 gallons of water, to control late blight. Penn State plant pathologists recommend.

MAYO CLINIC TO LIVE ON DESPITE DEATHS

The famed Mayo Clinic will live on as though its founders were still alive to guide it, according to an announcement as funeral arrangements were being made for Dr. William James Mayo, last of the "Mayo boys." Dr. "Will" as he was familiarly known died early last Thursday at the age of 73, just two months after the death of his younger brother, Dr. Charles H. Mayo, who was 78. Strangely enough, Dr. Will succumbed to a sub-acute perforated ulcer, in the treatment of which he had gained wide fame as a surgeon. The death of Charles, however, was believed to have hampered his recovery.

While the State College area was enjoying a fine rain last Thursday afternoon, Centre Hall and vicinity were sitting high and dry.
