Wallace, riding in the cab of the truck operated by Fred Hoover, of Hyde City, was instantly killed after the truck ran into the rear end of the towed car and then rolled 85 feet down the highway.

Baronak died at the Clearfield hospital several hours after admittance of injuries he received when his body was crushed between the towed car and the towed.

Three Baronak brothers—Mike, John and Adam, had parked the towed car, owned by John Baronak, and the towed car, and were adjusting the tow rope and when John yelled "Look out" as the truck loomed into view.

John leaped to safety as the truck smashed into the towed car while Mike was pinned and crushed between the two parked cars, Adam, standing near the side of the towed car, was thrown 20 feet into a field on the right hand side of the road. He was slightly injured.

The truck, after the collision, swayed and rolled down the highway for 88 feet where it stopped with the truck lying on its side. Wallace was found dead in the cab of the truck, his skull fractured.

Fred Hoover, driver of the truck, suffered a compound fracture of the skull. Also riding on the truck were Clifton Pickles, 39, Clearfield, who received a fractured skull, and Fred Hoover, Jr., 9, and John Ball, 23, both of Hyde. The Hoover youngster received a broken left arm and right leg while Ball's left arm and right shoulder were broken.

BOER WAR OFFERS NEUTRALITY MODEL

America's "neutrality and aloofness during the Boer War was offered by Dr. John H. Ferguson, assistant professor of political science at the Pennsylvania State College, as a model for America during the present war in Europe.

Dr. Ferguson, author of the book, "American Diplomacy and the Boer War," pointed out how America stayed out of the Boer War. He said: "During the Boer War, the United States assumed its traditional attitude of neutrality and aloofness, with complete indifference to the merits of the controversy or the alleged violations of international law, unless those violations affected American interests."

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or show poorly—your stomach often pours out too much acid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain of your stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes these little black tablets called Bull-son for indigestion to make the excess stomach acids harmless, relieve distress in 30 minutes and get you back on your feet. Bull-son is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bull-son for indigestion.
