Ar the grand harvest-home pic-nic to-morrow, at Keller's grove, there is to be a trial of speed between fast horses, owned by Messrs. Kuhn of Hanover and Mr. Tate of Gettysburg. A son of Jesse Reynold, of Washington tp., while unloading hay, with a patent screw fork, while unloading hay, with a patent screw lork, when the key accidentally slipped and the fork flew out, was thereby thrown from the wagon to the floor on his head, and the fork inflicted a wound of about five inches in depth in his side, just below the arm. The depth in his side, just below the arm. The wound, in connection with the concussion of the fall, caused the unfortunate man much pain, and great fears were entertained that his injuries would have a fatal tendency, but we are pleased to learn that he is now doing well under the circumstances.

TENNESSEE CONSERVATIOM .- It has become the fashion to decry the "Brownlow Government" as a miserable despotism, and to describe the Rebels in Tennessee as the most patient, abused, and long-suffering people on the feet, abused, and long-suffering people on the face of the earth. Now this is all bosh. After Lee's surrender the Rebels returned to their homes, regained immediate possession of all their property, except their slaves, and have been enjoying undisturbed possession of it ever since; and at the very first general it ever since; and at the very first general election that occurred they showed their appreciation of the generosity with which they had been treated by taking possession of nearby all the offices of trust and profit in the State, which they are holding now. The mayors and recorders of our claims, boards of aldermen, sheriffs, county court clerks, magistrates, constables, jail keepers, etc., etc., are all, or nearly all either returned Rebel soldiers, or stayat home Rebel sympathizers. These offices, in many cases, were filled by men who had not yet defied the gray uniform; and yet these returned Rebels, with fat salaries, cry themselves hoarse about the despotism of the its few heggarly offices, the Radicals have and all diseases of the UIRNARY ORGANS, next to nothing in the State. They are stan- whether existing in ding afar off, while the Rebels pocket the fat salaries, and howl over their wrongs. And what are their wrongs? Simply this: that what are their wrongs? Simply this: that take control of the State Government. When Tennessee was readmitted into the Union it was the understanding that the State government should remain in the hands of loyal men until equal rights should be established. William G. Brownlow is faithful to his pledges. That is his crime. Nothing more.

MONEY. - Men work for it, beg for it, steal for it, starve for it, and die for it; and all the while, from the cradle to the grave, nature and God are thundering in our ears the sol emn question: "What shall it profit a man if he mains the whole world and lose his own soul?" The madness for money is the strongest and lewest of the passions; it is the insataite Moloch of the human heart, before whos remorseless altar all the finer attributes of humanity are sacrificed. It makes merchandise of all that is sacred in the human affections, and even traffics in the awful solemnities of the eternal.
