Errors.—The little that I have seen of the world and known of the history of mankind, teaches me to look upon their errors in sorrow, not in anger. When I take the history of one poor heart that has sinned and suffered, and represent to myself the struggles and temptations it passed through; the tears of regret; the | hadn't finished the family while they war a brief pulsations of joy; the feebleness of pur- eatin," and moved on amidst shouts of laughpose: the scorn of the world that has little char-

It is true that men often forget them and act against their bidding in the keen competition of business and politics. But God has not left the hard intellect of man to work out its devices without the constant presence of beings with gentler and purer instincts. The heart of woman is the ever-rocking cralle of the pure and hely sentiments which will sooner or later steal their way into the mind of her sterner companion; which will by and by emerge into the thought of the world's teachers, and at last thunder forth in the edicts of its law givers and masters. As the infant begins to discriminate beween the objects around, it soon discovers over its cradle. MESSES, EDITORS: - As you have on several occasions solicited contributions to your "Farmera Column. I herewith send the following, which you may publish if you consider it of sufficient interest.

Having recently had the pleasure of seeing some fine Alderney stock, the thought has occurred to me that a communication in regard to it would not be uninteresting to the farmers of our county. My attention has been called to this stock by the fact that I have always found it almost impossible to obtain from my cows anything like the yield of bath morning in a church not far from this butter which many men represent theirs as village. The clergyman was discoursing as | yielding. By many men cows are said to proeloquently as the state of the weather would | duce from 6 to 7, 8, 9, and even 12 pounds of permit, yet one of his auditors—a young lady | butter per week, as though it were no uncom--was so overcome by the heat as to fall a- mon thing; and yet I will venture to say aleep in the midst of the discourse. Some of these animals afe beautiwedlock, sent the marriage notice, with a ful in appearance—their handsome fawn or couplet of his own composition, to a local pa- squirrel color, with black nose, eyes, and mouth, make them look more like deer than cows. But this is only true of some; others are not any prettier than the veriest "scrub" that tinkles her bell on a village common.-In fact, the greatest disadvantage under which this stock labors, is, that it is not sufficiently showy for the ordinary observer. The Durham or the Devon will attract attention by their fine, large, showy appearance, whilst the less attractive Alderney will be passed by nnnoticed. Their peculiarities are a long, narrow face, and long, lean lower jaw, long joints in all their limbs, small, oftentimes crooked, horns, narrow chest, sharp withers, pointed or peaked in the hind quarters, and an immense abdomen as compared with the size of the carcass. The last peculiarity is the most noticeable of all their "points," and indicates, above all others, good milking qualities. In looking over the herd I inquired the prices at the Dijon Railway, an old man who had es such as seemed to me most desirable. When I was told this, I was disposed to be a little incredulous, but Mr. Shinn persisted in affirming gin from imported stock. Mr. Shinn's oldest bull, "Putnam," bred by William F. Potts. Here he had beiters and bulls of nearly all ages, some of them very fine, and others rather coarse-looking. Heifer-calves just taken from the cow he priced at $100; bulls the same age could be had for less moneybulls fit for service in the neighborhood of $200. There is always more demand for heifer than for bull calves. This makes their

ed for this stock are comparatively high, and if there is not great virtue in them somewhere it may well be called a fancy price. Of their actual value as butter-makers I was very anxious to convince myself, but did not entirely succeed. Mr. Shinn said he would guarantee his herd to average near nine pounds per week, but, at the same time, presented no facts to show that they had ever done so. He had never made the trial with any but one heifer, which had made 10 lbs., when fresh. This one he had sold to R. Hitcheson'Alexander, of Kentucky. He stated further, that he had on one occasion seen cream an inch thick on a glass pan not more than four inches deep. Such facts, of course, go far towards recommending the stock; and, if breeders generally could produce more indisputable facts of this kind, their stock would gain greater popularity. But I must be pardoned here for remarking that the general absence of thoroughly substantiated statements of this sort, strikes one as looking a little suspicious SOLDIER WIT.-We have read many amusing If, whilst looking over a herd of Alderney cows, their owner can stand by you and point out such a cow as now making her 10 fantryman. It was on the march toward &c. But to expect men to buy cows to obtain positive facts as to their milking "I say, mister, you are mighty like a Brother and creaming qualities, is unreasonable.-With reflections of this sort, I parted with Mr. Shinn at the Depot assuring him that my visit to his place had been one of no ordinary interest and pleasure to me; and feeling more firmly convinced than ever that if our milking stock can be improved by the introduction of any thorough-bred stock, it is to the Alderneys we are to look for this im provement. To any one desiring to make the experiment, I can cheerfully recommend an nspection of Mr. Shinn's herd from which to select the stock to begin with. On my return, stopped in Chester county to see the noted hog stock of that region, some account of which I will communicate, if agreeable to you.

THE Germantown Telegraph gives the following plan for preserving cabbage during the winter: "Select a dry part of the garden -dig trenches of sufficient depth to receive the cabbage roots and stalks up to the headinto these trenches transplant the cabbage, heads up of course—fill in dirt carefully about them up to the heads—plant four short posts, two of them being higher than the others to give a pitch to the roof-nail suingling, lath, haulm, protecting also the sides—and your cabbage will will in good condition until May. Where there is a fence only two posts will be necessary—that being employed as the apex of the cover or roof."
