And she laughed at his joking. And still they popped, and still they are, (John's mouth was like a hopper), And stirred the fire and sprinkled salt, And shook and shook the popper.

The clock struck nine, the clock struck ten And still the corn kept popping; It struck eleven and then struck twelve, And still no signs of stopping. And John he ate and Sue she thought-The corn did pop and patter.

Till John cried out, "The corn's afire! Why, Susan, what's the matter?" Said she, "John Stiles, it's one o'clock; You'll die of indigestion: I'm sick of all this popping corn-

Why don't you pop the question?" PROFIT OF KEEPING BEES.

With the right attention and skill, this och cupation is as pleasant and profitable as any connected with raral life. But, like all others, success comes after diligent efforts only, and failure attends attempts where there is a want of thoroughness. Mrs. Ellen S. Tupper con-Ttributes in The Kansas Farmer her experience and estimate of profit in bee-keeping:

"As a proof that bee-keeping, as a business, pays as well or better than any branch of horticulture, I would state that I am now offered for my bees $500 in cash. It is not yet six years since I paid $20 for the four stands with which I commenced the business. I have never bought a hive since. So this is the increase of my capital in five seasons, saying nothing of the bees, honey, and wax sold in the meantime, or the pleasure derived from the business. Now that I have so many hives, I find the profit increasing every year, without requiring more time and labor than I bestowed on a few. So far from there being any danger of overstocking, I find my bees have done better the two past poor seasons than many have done where there were but a few hives kept in one place; anc I am convinced that, where they are managed rightly, hundreds of colonies will do well where one will. To accomplish this, however, it is indispensable to have them strong and vigorous in spring, that they may take advantage of the Whole honey harvest."

experiments with the Italian and native bees, "In the summer of 1860 I commenced some experiments with bees, using hives of my own construction, with a design of securing the greatest amount of honey. In the years 1860, '61, and '62 my hives averaged from thirty to forty pounds of surplus honey. In 1864 the bees in thirteen hives gave seven hundred and ninety-seven pounds of surplus honey, averaging sixty-one and four-thirteenth pounds to each hive. The present season I had eight colonies, in hives of my own design and manufacture, which gave six swarms and five hundred pounds of surplus honey .-In a different kind of hives, in which I placed four swarms last season, I have this season four new swarms and five hundred pounds of surplus honey. One of these last colonies was Italian bees, and three of them natives or black bees. The Italian colony gave two swarms and one hundred and six pounds of surplus honey; one of the native colonies gave two swarms and ninety-nine pounds of surplus honey; one gave one hundred and twenty-three pounds of surplus honey, but no swarms; and the other one hundred and seventy-four of honey, but no swarm; averaging to each hive one swarm and one hundred and twenty-five pounds of honey. The experiment showing that in the last class of bees the production was double of that in the first class.

A gentleman living in Texas possessed 350 hives of bees, and the yearly income therefrom was over $1,000. They required but little care, the whole not over two weeks' work in the course of the year.

THE GREAT CHOLERA

THE GREAT Zingari Bitters. THIS WONWERPUL REMEDY was discovered an is, an eminent Egyptian physician. He had long seen and felt the want of some remedy ent much of the auffering which the human family was en compelled to endure. This great question was presented to his mind every Notices and a gold medal with the following inscription—Dr. S.Cheopsia, the Public Bunefactor—was presented to him by the Viceroy.

The preparation has been used in several epidemics of cholera, both as a preventive and curative measure, and with such great success, that it has been introduced into nearly all the general hospitals of the old world.

The old saying that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, applies with marvellous force to cholera, and therefore any remedy that will protect as against this terrible disease should be freely and persistently sued. sucd.
All pathologists now agree that the cholera poison acts on the system through the blood, and that any combination which acts on the excretory organs, and keeps them in working order, must prevent a sufficient accumulation of the poison to exert itaterrible effects on the organism. This is true not only of cholera, but of nearly all other inaladies, especially the different forms of fever.

The Zingari Bitters is just such a remedy as the above conditions require. It acts on the organism's excretion maladies, especially the different forms of fever. The Zingari Bitters is just such a remedy as the above conditions require. It acts on the organs of excretion and secretion, keeping up a perfect balance between them. This Bitters is composed entirely of roots and terbs, so nicely concocted that every organ is acted upon an put in tone. Its taste is pleasant and its effects prompt and lasting.

Numerous cases of the following diseases have been cured by it: Cholera, Diarrhea, Dysentery, Scrofula, Typhoid and Typhus Ferer, Fever, Agus, Nervous Debility, Ansenia, Female Irregularities, Dyspepsia, Flatulency, Colic, &c.
