DISEASES OF POULTRY.

The diseases of poultry, being taken in time, may not result in a serious malady, too often resulting in death; but procuring...

The ailments of fowls may generally be traced to a variable temperature, to irregular, injudicious feeding, or to their being kept on ground which is not clean...

The following are the principal diseases among them: Apoplexy, evidenced by inflammation of the brain. Tracheal inflammation (or gasps), with parastic worms in the windpipe.

Apoplexy with fowls, as in human beings, is difficult to cure. It is generally the result of high feeding, and is most common among laying hens, which are sometimes found dead in the nest—the explosive efforts required in laying—the immediate cause of the attack.

The only hope for cure consists in instant and copious bleeding, by opening a vein with a sharp-pointed penknife or lancet.

The larger of the veins seen on the under-side of the wing, should be selected, and opened in a longitudinal direction, not cut across, and so long as the thumb is pressed on the vein at any point between the opening and the body, the blood will be found to flow freely.

Water should be given in small quantities, and in frequent doses, and if a certain preventive (not cure) is desired, the use of camphor will be found the most effectual remedy.

It is a small, round, about the size of a peanut kept constantly in the vessel from which the fowls drink, will make gapes unknown in your yard.

But another remedy, which is more particularly, and having raised over two hundred chickens, without one case of gape, I can testify that camphor is the only certain remedy. My neighbor, "F," who is also a member of the Pennsylvania Poultry Society, and who has equal for poultry rearing, has lost three-fourths of his chickens by gapes, which I attribute to his use of water and house of wood.

Water, after having stood some time, be found, by examination under a microscope, to contain worms identical with those taken from the throat of a chicken suffering under gape.

Boop, if treated at the outset, may be cured by feeding twice a day, with stale crumbs of bread soaked in strong ale. Dry housing and cleanliness are indispensable.

People sometimes mistake dry without any apparent disease. In such cases a teaspoonful of cod-liver oil per day will often find a most efficacious remedy.

Scouring or diarrhoea is caused by the too liberal use of remaining food. Cayenne pepper, or chalk, or both, mixed with meal or boiled rice, check the complaint.

Leg weakness is generally caused by the size and weight of the body being more than legs can bear. It is shown by the bird resting on the first joint. Being cured, the result of weakness, the best treatment is that which gives general strength and stamina to the sufferer.
