The Star and Sentinel. Gettysburg, Friday, Nov. 12, 1968. I know a windmill is an ordinary thing, that there is nothing heautiful about it—but it there is nothing heautiful about it—but it remember seeing one that seemed beautiful. It had its history. When Frederick the Great was Emperor of Prussis, he went out a little way from Berlin and built him a palace at Sans Souci. He and the Empress were scated, one Sabbath afternoon, in their beautiful grounds, and the Empress said:

I don't like that old windmill over there. I wish you would buy the grounds and tear I wish you would buy the grounds and tear it away, as it mars the beauty of our grounds, being right alongside and so near them here." "I'll do it to-morrow," said he. So on the morrow he went to the miller and M'CURDY & HAMILTON told him he wished to buy his little home stead. "I don't wish to sell," said the "But," said the Emperor, "I must have it. I wish to extend and beautify my grounds, and your windmill is a sore eye to the Empress." "But," said he, "my grandfather is buried yonder, and my father is buried there, and my great grand grand-father over there, and this has been the WHEAT, CLOVER, AND TIMOTHY-SEEDS, POTATOES, &c., &c., want to live and die here, and I can not sell it." The Emperor, getting out of natience, said he would order his men tear the mill down, and take possession of the grounds Said the miller, "May it please your Majesty, there are laws in Prussia, and I can sue you." "I don't care," said the Emperor, and went on and tore down the mill. The miller sued him, and the courts decided against his Majesty, and declared that he should rebuild the mill, and pay, to the last farthing, all the miller had lost. The Emperor bowed his head, went and rebuilt the nill, and paid all damages. After awhile Frederick the Great was in his grave, and the old miller was gone; but by and by July 3, 1867 .- tf another miller was there, and another Emperor was on the throne. The miller wrote to his reiging Majesty, that so many years ago, his grandfather had refused to sell his he, "I am poor and need the money, and I will sell, and hope the price may be such as to please your majesty; I must have $5,000." The Emperor with his own hand wrote a The Emperor with his own hand wrote a reply. He wrote simply this: "You say you are poor, I am sorry for it. You are willing to sell your windmill for $5,000. willing to sell your windmill for $5,000. The windmill cannot be sold. It belongs to Prussian history. Inclosed find my check for $5,000." And the name and the great seal of the Emperor was affixed. I stood near that mill on a beautiful afternoon, and as I wandered among the trees, and caught the fragrance from ten thousand beautiful flowers that filled the air with their perfume, I thought the most beautiful its ungainly arms, and as I watched itswing we will around those arms the tears came unbidden to my eyes, for it seemed to me to awing LINE of FREIGHT CARS those giant arms around as for the defense of the rights of the humblest men, for the poor as well as the mightiest. pruning. It is to strengthen the buds and canes which are left. Many think that it will have no such effect. But if they will prune two vines in the same manner-one in the fall as soon as the leaves are destroyly frost, the other the following spring they will find that fall pruned vines will be much more vigorous and productive the ensuing summer. The vine is not dead in the winter. Its roots continue to absorb food, though, of course, in much less quantity than in summer. The nutriment thus absorbed is distributed throughout the vine. -All the buds are more or less benefited, but as the buds remotest from the roots always receive the principal flow of sap, they are most benefited. Now by pruning in the fall, all this is saved in the buds and cane we have left for bearing. It is upon this principle that we always prune in the fall or winter for wood. By summer pruning we check the wood growth as all know. The buds that are left will become strengthened by the sap they have received which the winter. They will nucleon the sap they have received which the winter. They will nucleon the will Fair, also at the destyleting Mowing Match over during the winter. They will push early and vigorously in the spring; and if well cared for, will delight the eyes of the beholders with large clusters of luscious fruit that they produce.-Rura l World.
