Naturally the animal, to have full use of its muscles, must have its head and neck free, and having this, it will in exertion carry its head downward. The ignorance of this fact on the part of many owners and drivers of horses is the cause of not only much pain to the horse, as is testified to by the distortion of the muscles of the mouth, but of loss of time to the owner. It impairs the trotter's impeat; it impairs the draught horse's atrength. A celebrated veterinary surgeon, in speaking of the effect of the, check rein horse was so mishaped as to prevent perfect respiration. A fact which many of the owners of our Broad street uptiters would do will to earefully consider.
