Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the condence of mankind, as this excellent remedy of propilmosary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of theraces of men it has rises higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its suiform character and power to core the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of discass and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incident consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat end lungs.
