In her career of new-born light, we can find a room, lead me to it, and you shail have gold." The pauper led the way into a parrow filthy street, and then down into a cellar, and into a dark and filthy room. The other female could not but feel a sickening sensation creep over her, but she recovered her self. After contemplating for a time the apartment, and what it contained, she ask-"Are you well known in Paris ?" "Yes. Everybody knows Maria, the Beggar Girl.' "Are you known to Robespierre ? If so want to make a bargain with you." "I am. What do you wish ?" "You see my clothing is better than you own, and I wish to exchange with you. want you to consent to remain here, and not to show yourself at all for a short time, or until I come to you again. As recompense for siding me I will give you a thousand francs, and when I come back, I wil! give you a thousand more. As security for my return take this ring." The lady drew a diamond ring from he inger, and gave it to the beggar-girl. Then handed her a purse containing gold. The girl appeared a little puzzled, and asked : "Well, what are you going to do with my ireas ?" "I want to put it on, and go where I first tet you." "Oh, I understand now. You want to see the chopping go on, and you are afraid you will be taken for an aristocrat if you wear that dress. You want to represent "Yes. I want to look as near like you as possible. "Well, that won't be difficult. Your hair can alter that with a little dirt." They exchanged dresses, and soon the young, rich, and noble Marie de Nantes was clad in the rags of Maris, the Beggar Girl of Paris. The history of Marie de Nantes was a sad one. Her father and two brothers had fallen victims to the remorseless fiends of the Revolution, and a third and last brother had been seized. But of his fate she was ignorant, although she expected that it vould be similar to that of her other reatives. He had been torn from her side but a few hours before. After the exchange had been made the proper looked on the stockingless and shoeless fort and ankles of the lady, and said : "That will never do. Your feet are too vhite and delicate.
