versems. THE BIBLE IN COMMON SCHOOLS. The agitation in regard to the exclusion of the Bible from the Common Schools continues. The religious journals of the country generally, with the leading secular press, have been discussing the matter pro and con-the general line of argument being in favor of exclusion either as a matter of right or as a concession requisite to save the Common School system itself. Practically, we presume there are few if any Schools in which the Bible is used as a text-book-graded Readers, specially prepared by practical educators, being found as essential to successful teaching in this department as in Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography, Philosophy. &c. There was a time, long years ago, when Pike's or Jesse's Arithmetic, Webster's Speller, and the New Testament, constituted the text-books of day Schools. Not so now. Hence the question of its exclusion is mainly a theoretic one, and if the concession will stop the clamor against our Common School system or disarm essential hostilityto it, by silencing the cry of sectarianism, much will be gained. We which must array against it the bitter hostility of the Catholic Church, in addition to the powerful influences always at work against education based on taxation. When it comes to striking down the Common School system it self-or what is virtually the same thing, appropriating the school fund to the support of sectarian Schoolsthere will be little or no difference between the true friends of popular education. Presbyterians, Lutherans, Methodists, Reformed, Episcopalians, and Catholics, have, of course, a right te organize and support as many parish Schools as they see fit; but they have no right to demand aid from the State. nant to the provisions of our State and National Constitutions, will apply the maintenance of purely sectarian Schools by State aid. An unsectarian necessarily imply an irreligious system. One of the central ideas of our Government is religious liberty. We have grown to be a great nation because here religious liberty is best understood and most perfectly enjoyed .-We represent in our people all shades of religious opinion and belief, and while the reading of the Bible in our er, and the vote stood Etrang 59, and disbursement of public funds, Common Schools can do no body any Brown 40. harm there does seem to be plausibility in the demand that neither the Protestant nor Douay version of the Scriptures should be insisted on in the Legislature on Wednesday. lar education-a basis which will make a simple square issue, that can be easily met and promptly decided. THE example of the Presbyterians in uniting in one Church organization after thirty years of division is having its effect upon the Methodists. Like ury. the Presbyterians, their divisions have not proceeded from doctrinal dissensions, but from questions of moral and ecclesiastical discipline. The Protestant Methodists withdrew from the mother Church on the question of lay representation in their Conferences, and on the appointment of ministers by the Bichops. So far as appointments are concerned, the power of the Bishops to appoint has been so modified that it s pretty generally known before a conference assembles where the principal portion of them are to be assigned. The admission of the laity to the General Conference, on which the Protestant Methodists withdrew, has at last triumphed, and a movement will be triumphed, and a movement will be inaugurated for a re-union of the two bodies. The abolition of Slavery has removed the rock which split the Methodist Church North and South, and although the recent overtures of the Northern Bishops, looking to a re-union, were rejected by the Southern
