DEMOCRATIC MULTIPLICATION.

And yet there are a good many people who think all that is said about New York political swindling and misgovernment is mocracy with absolute conclusiveness. -Every one knows there are not so many voters in any community as there are inhabitants. Women and children and unnaturalized foreigners have no right to cepted rule is, that in rural districts the shabitants exceed the voters by about five to one, and in large cities, where there are many foreigners, about seven to

If we apply this rule to New York city we shall discover the singular nature of Democratic multiplication. There was a city election in New York, it will be recollected, last May, which resulted in a "Now, do you know," said he, "I think great Democratic triumph. Since then, the census has been taken in many of the districts, and it appears that in the strong

Thus in strong Democratic districts wo have twenty-two thousand people, including men, women, boys, girls, infants, and unnaturalized foreigners casting fortyseven thousand votes! These Democrats have to vote early and vote often to accomplish such astounding and atroclous results.
