THE STAR AND SENTINEL.
A THAKNSGIVING STORY.
BY A. ANNE PIPER.

"You will dine with me on Thanksgiving Day, will you not? It is but a poor table, but I can offer you, nowadays; not what I once spread."

"You were so kind to invite me,"
said the young man, "but I am sorry to hear that you are so poor. I will dine with you, but I will not
eat of your bread."

"I am not poor," said the young man,
"I am only a poor man. I have a little money, but I do not want to
eat of your bread."

"I am not poor," said the young man,
"I am only a poor man. I have a little money, but I do not want to
eat of your bread."

"I am not poor," said the young man,
