The French have already got into trouble. The armistice concluded with the Paris Government contemplated the election of a National Assembly, to secure a free expression of the national will, and provide a responsible government to negotiate terms of peace.

Bismarck, in a letter to the Paris Government, drew attention to this question of condition. Gambetta, on the other hand, from Bordeaux issued a counter call for elections, excluding all who have held office under the empire.

The intelligence from France is contradictory, but the telegrams indicate that the popular feeling is adverse to Gambetta's policy, with a growing desire for peace.
