Educational Nepartment.

BY ALBERT OWEN.

Fourth proposition: Our common school system is deficient, without greater advantages for the juvenile portion of the scholars: heavy, remember him and his example. the support of summer schools will do much to supply the defect; and by it the winter sessions will be more beneficial.

In general, our common schools in the country open about the first of November and continuc four months. In some districts they open a little earlier and continue longer than the time stated; but my remarks will apply to them as well as to the former. During the first month of the session there is a poor winter. Thus passes the first month, and no and the little school-house with its poor ac-

If in the rural districts, different schools would unite and support a summer school for the benefit of the juveniles, a few months instruction would be more beneficial than years of schooling, such as many now receive .-These juveniles if provided for in the summer, could leave the winter sessions to the advanced scholars and they could have the you will set your face against, and that is full benefit of the teacher's time. ## SKETCH OF ADDRESS BY BISHOP POTTER,

To the Students of the Lancaster County Nor mal School, June 4, 1856.

To me it is a great and unexpected pleaspart of the State, I have diverged from my course to give myself this opportunity; and I am surprised and gratified to find here such a group of minds. Your building itself is a noble monument to the generosity and enterprise of the people of this vicinity, and it is the advent of a great and auspicious era for the educational interests of Pennsylvania.

Lancaster County has long been famed for her husbandry. Linked with this her name has gone far and wide. Now let it go forth joined with the nobler fame of the husbandry of the mind.—that culture which is not for the material and perishing present, but for recipe for a cold is going the rounds of the

I am myself an old teacher; much of the early part of my life was spent as one, and I | mistake. Fortunately for the sufferer, a botlook back upon those days as by no means the of sweet oil stood on the same shelf from the least useful, as certainly they were the happiest, of my life. No vocation is more conducive to self-improvement than that of teaching. The best way to learn is to teach; for the very necessity which exists for imparting information apon a subject to others, is the strongest in- it is that man who has brought that bread centive to the gaining of a close and comprehensive kdowledge of it ourselves. in active operation, and brings the most exalted happiness as the reward of our labor." The ideal of the Teacher, what shall it be? Oh! my friends, we need not ask, when we have before us the example of the great Teacher; greatest in practice, theory, idea and person; all perfect; spotless; loving little children with warmest love, presenting them on all occasions as types of innocence and purity; patient, gentle, and slow to anger. Such was the god-sent Teacher. Oh! when the days are dark and your cares are

You will have many—very many—trials in your teaching; dullness and perversity in your pupils; lack of ec-operation on the part of parents; and oftentimes a general inappreciation of your labors. But do not let these things discourage you; perhaps you were once dull yourself; and remember too you are dealing with a human being, whose God has given him more or less intellect, as seemed good in his sight, and shall you dare udge of the wisdom of His works? My first pupil was a colored man, thirty years of age: he was placed under my instruction afattendance, for the autumn is at hand—the ter I left College, by a gentleman who wish-small children have not got their shoes and ed him educated for the ministry, to be the winter clothing: their parents have been bearer of the words of life to those of his own busy of late and this one thing has been for- without mental cultivation or discipline, he gotten. December—win- tient, uncomplaining, confiding, long-sufferter comes and so do the scholars: large and ing, with the beams of knowledge slowly pensmall, civil and rude, learned and unlearned; | ctrating the dark clouds of ignorance that enveloped his soul.

At last he had his reward: his childlike commodations is filled to overflowing. Then the teacher has a glorious portunity to the teacher has a glorious portunity to the mighty transformation they wrought; show his ability to teach. If he possessed and no thanks to me, for I might perhaps the fire of a Randolph, the ability of a Watts, than I did. Yes, he had his reward even in have lightened his heavy burden far more and the devotion of a Wesley, he would this life. I saw him stand in the sacred desk, doubtless be able to accomplish much even in I heard the words of cloquence which thrillthese circumstances. But we do not often ed the inmost hearts of his people. Oh! my friends, let this be an example to you; never despair; draw largely on your perseverance,-on your Christian charity,-

Were I to live my life over again, knowing what I now know, I would spend more time daily in preparation for labor. This is very necessary and is in many cases, I fear, sadly neglected; for pupils go to school not so much to learn a science itself, as to learn how to learn it Therefore in all cases when it is practicable, it is far better to cast aside the book and depend upon yourself and your pupils, for a just appreciation of the subject.— You are thus laying for them a noble basis of self-education:
