The Secretary then read his annual report, together with the reports of the Chairman and Treasurer of the Trustees of the Farmers' High School. The latter report showed the receipts of the School Fund to be $16,-579.17, and the expenditures for the year, $11,535.76, leaving a balance of $5,043.41 in the Treasury.

It was announced that the Treasurer of the Society was unable to be present, in consequence of the severity of the recent storm. On motion, the Society proceeded to make nominations and elect officers for the ensuing year.

Mr. James Gowan, of Philadelphia, being nominated, the Secretary read a letter from that gentleman, in which he respectfully declined serving as President; whereupon - Mr. Kerr offered the following resolution which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the members of the State Agricultural Society tender to Hon. JAMES GOWAN their grateful thanks for the able and efficient discharge of his duties as President of this Society, and that in his retirement from office he carries with him the best wishes and kindest regards of the members, collectively and individually.

After the withdrawal of Mr. Gowan's name, Mr. Kerr nominated Hon. Wm. Wilkins, of Allegheny county, for President; who being present, returned his thanks for the honor conferred upon him by the nomination, but soil strength. respectfully declined serving.

The nominations for the officers were then made, when the Chair appointed Jas. Gowen and Kirk Espy, of Harrisburg, tellers, and the members proceeded to ballot for the several candidates, which resulted in the election of the following consist not in: "much labor," but in much growth on the part of nature and much art on the part of man. We see, that the growth can be increased from the effects of the atmosphere (which is free of expense) to a much larger extent than has hitherto been realized, and that a larger part of labor, which at present has to be naid with money, can be effected by the increase of growth; and by this growth and by a greater labor saving art of management, the farms can be supported so as to produce "the most abundant continual increase of produce without an addition of expense," consequently an increasing land revenue. Such a system appears to me of the most important consequences in the United States, and for the last fifteen years I have been endeavoring to arrange the farms to an organism of a continual rising of a land revenue. This organism I place therefore in the fol-ment of the powers of nature the farm, and | ing of editorial conscience, in the neighborby the management of the powers of art the | hoods from whence they started, these men. profession must rise to a mutual increase of instead of occupying positions that should produce, and increase of revenue; consequent- only be filled by first-class men, would now ly partly by the science and partly by the be following the plough, or plodding along art of agriculture. Shall agriculture come to revenue, it can certainly in no other way be effected, unless nue steps between the profession and science and that the talents and abilities of the farmer for this purpose must be elevated and exercised.

The farmer must be able to raise a larger quantity and of a better quality of produce at a smaller expense, in order to become wealthy, by agriculture, and to arrange the farm so, that this will be always possible, signifies to raise it to the organism of a continual rising of its land revenue and of its husbandry revenue.

These two things do support and are depenlent on each other, for to produce a higher valuation of a nobler quality of animals and plant production, we need a larger selection and quantity of fodder, and a selection of

Only by thus operating together and alternately can a continual raising of soil revenue be possible. For it is very natural that we must get wealthier if we pursue this course. as hitherto we pursued but one; and that to continue the two practices of the art and science, no end to our success can be estimated. For the present condition of farming the manner of a yearly larger produce for the present expense is not introduced at all. We raise certainly here and there larger productions, but with larger expense, while we, instead of the growth increased only the labor. The larger valuation of the land production by nobler stocks of animals, agricultural manufactures, &c., the natural direction is indeed zealously emulated; but it finds its limits in the falling of the market prices, and in the want of the land revenue it finds cessation and lameness. The improvement of nobler stock of animals is prevented out of the want of a proper selection of fodder and pasture quality, for the fodder is to the animal a chemical formation of strength, and a better selection is only possible by a continual larger produce and variety. But hereby is also prevented the cultivaprove this land enough. This condition of William Wray.... soil revenue is a crying reality.

Post says:

"It is amusing to hear a small politician, who owes his whole importance to the influ-ence of the pross, talk contemptuously of newspapers and editors. There is no stronger proof of the "power of the press" than the fact that it can raise such timber-heads into high places. Luckily a single pull on the same lever can bring them down again to their proper level-did they not inevitably fall of their own feebleness."

Sensible fellow that Post man; he talks like a Dutch uncle. Many who are now great men would be nowhere, if it were not for the labors of editors. These small affairs, who are thought by the distant public to be sort of thing, owe all they have and are to in some of the humbler walks of life.
