EXTENSIVE-The practice of the "fusion doctors," but their success is bad, numerous cases having been given.up as incurate.

Ano The Hollidaysburg Register thinks it will require the united strength of the "American Republicans and Republican Americans" to beat the Locofocos! The Judge don't make a bad guess!

for It is supposed that there are now five factions opposed to the great National Democratic party-the Know Nothings, Black Republicans, American Republicans, Republican Americans, and Red Republicans. It bothers our brains to keep "the run" of these new parties, but we guess they are harmless, and won't hurt the locofocos. If they do, we'll publish it.

25 The Huntingdon American is moderately in favor of "phuzion," but the rank "Americans" are not-Know Nothing Republicans are scarce, and the former won't swallow niggerism, nor allow niggerism to swallow them. We hope the fusion sentiment will prevail, and that the numerous rag-tag and bob-tail factions will be consolidated into one party, as much as it can be done by the mighty leaders. It surely cannot be impossible to force "Americans' to kiss the lips of the niggers. It was tried last fall, and with a little more exertion, it might succeed. The wedding, we presume, will be followed by a grand plantation dance has excelled herself. Vivia, the heroine, is a beautiful, gifted and inspiring maiden, whose presence is a life-giving power to all within her sphere: whose influence, like magic or rather like grace, develops the botter nature of all with whom she is brought in contact-so redeeming, elevating and inspiring is her benignant influence upon the dreaming girl-artist Theodora, and the poor, but gifted and inspiring peasant boy, Wakefield. Her "Secret Power" consists in her realizing FAITH in goodness, wisdom and efficiency, latent in every human creature, made in the likeness of the Creator; in her sympathetic CHARITY that leads her to seek and draw forth these hidden treasures in all souls: and her animating HOPE that assures her of victory. and Hope. she overcomes in herself and in others, the fearful powers of the World, the Flesh and the Devil. Like her Divine Master, she comes to bring light to the darkened, hope to the despairing, and strength to the weak. Whenever in the narrative she appears, it is as if a sun-burst lighted up the scene. It would be impossible within this short limit to give a fair idea of the character of this work. In the first chapter the interest of the reader is powerfully aroused, and is kept keenly alive to the close of the volume. The story opens with the description of a snow storm on the Alleghanies, through which the bright and beautiful orphan, alone or attended by her dog, wanders down the fearful passes towards the valley, endeavoring to reach the mansion where her grandfather, Colonel Malmaison, (who had ten years before, discarded her father,) lies dying and penitent, and praying to see his orphan grand-daughter. But in the two-fold darkness of night and storm, the wandering child loses her way, and chances to reach a lone convent, where she seeks refuge and is kindly received and comforted by the nuns.

VIVIA: THE SECRET OF POWER. By Mrs. EMMA D. E. N. Southworth, author of "Lost Heir-ess," Deserted Wife," "Missing Bride," "India," &c., &c. Complete in one large duodecimo volume, neatly bound in cloth, for one Dollar and Twenty-five cents: or in two_volumes, paper cover, for one Dollar.

THE BORDER ROVER. By Emerson Bennett, author of "Clara Moreland," "The Prairie Flower," "Leni Leoti," "Viola," &c., &c.-Complete in two large duodecimo volumes, neatly bound in paper cover. Price One Dollar.

Perhaps it is enough to say of the Border Rover, that it is one of Emerson Bennett's best productions, and will be sure to delight all our readers who are pleased with the Prairie Flower and Clara Moreland, to which it may be considered a companion-the scenes and the incidents being something similar, and yet the story totally unlike either of the others. The scene of the Border Rover is in the Territory of Kanas, beginning at Independence, Missouri, and extending all over the plains or prairies to the Rocky Mountains. It is full of adventure and hair breadth escapes, love, romance and humor, ing to hope. The executioners now apand the characters are trappers, traders, hunters, travelers, guides, Indians, &c. Furthermore, the scenes are geographically correct, the blood in his body seemed to be turned into

The cemetery, one mile north-west of Harrisburg. Here, I noticed the names of many persons who have figured in the past history of this State. Many beautiful monuments are here erected in memory of the dead. The grave of Harris, the founder of Harrisburg, on the bank of the Susquehanna, a short distance below the bridge, is surrounded by a high iron railing, and enclosed is the trunk of the tree, some eight or ten feet high, to which the Indians had him tied. We visited the State Capitol. The Legislature not being in session, we, for awhile, took their place. Had the pleasure With these spiritual agencies of Faith, Charity of taking a seat on the chair on which John Hancock sat, when Congress passed the Declaration of Independence. It is now the Speaker's chair in the House of Representatives, being brought from Independence Hall, in Philadelphia. The view from the cupola of the Capitol, is beautiful. The country on the one side, as far as the eye can reach, is covered with fertile farms; the buildings in the distance, seem mere white specks. On the other side, the placid waters of the Susquehanna.

Execution of Louis XVI.

At ten minutes past ten they reached the foot of the scaffold. It had been erected in front of the palace of the Tuileries, in the square called after Louis XIV, and near the spot where stood the statue of the most impure of kings—a king who died tranquilly in his bed. The condemned man was three minutes descending from the . carriage .-Upon quitting the Temple he had refused the riding coat which Clery had offered to him and now appeared in a brown coat, white waistcoat, gray breeches and white stockings. His hair was not disordered, nor was any change perceptible in his countenance. The Abbe Firmont was dressed in black. A large open space had been kept round the scaffold, with cannon ranged on all sides, while beyond, as far as the eye could reach, stood an unarmed multitude .--The executioner had opened the door of the coach, and descending, Louis fixed his eyes upon the soldiers who surrounded him, and, with a terrible voice, cried, "Silence !" The drums ceased to beat, but at a signal from the officer the drummers again went on. "What treason is this?" he shouted. "I am lost! I am lost!" For it was evident that, up to this moment, he had been clingproached to take off a part of his clothes; he repulsed them fiercely, and himself removed the collar from his neck. But all the

TATE OF WM. LOGAN, dec'd.

"We have lost," said a gentlema ty among the lawyers. "not less than six eminent barristers in as many months." The Dean, who was quite deaf, rose as his friend finished his remarks, and gave the company grace: "For this and every other mercy, the Lord's name be praised !" The cf. fect was irresistable.

ELMIRA A FAST TOWN-A GARROTING CASE.-We live in a fast age, and as the inhabitants of Elmira are as "fast" as any people we wot of between here and sundown, as a matter of course all the follies and vices of the age-we'll say nothing about the virtues of the world here or elsewhere-are imitated here in the Queen City of the Southern Tier, that is, on a small scale. We have our drinking saloons, our gambling establishments, our houses of questionable character; we have our loafers, our rowdies, our thieves, our vagrants, our burglars, our highway robbers; we have our watchmen, our watch-house, our Police Justice; we have a jail that is kept filled with Gentlemen,

> "Who have nothing else to do But just to walk about."

We pay heavy taxes, live fashionably, and enjoy the world hugely; we have railroads, and canals, and gas lights; we have three daily papers, a number of churches, and a Female College. In fact, we have everything that is useful and useless-morality and immorality-riches and poverty-mingled, in as heterogeneous a mass as it is in the largest of the Atlantic cities. If we have all these things, it will not surprise anybody to learn that we have our garroters also.-A few nights since, as we were returning home, we were compelled to be the witness of an attempt to garotte a woman who was peaceably walking down Church street. She was accompanied by a man who had as sweet an Irish brogue as ever greeted the ears of Gen. Scott. They were conversing sotto voce, when all of a sudden • the man put his left arm around her neck; and before she had time to call for help, another Patlander stepped up from behind and threw his right arm also around the sume neck! Here was a clear case of garroting; and we would have gone immediately to the rescue of the almost strangled woman. called the watch, or done something else equally astonishing, had we not learned. years ago, "that discretion is the better part of valor." We stopped a moment-vainly endeavoring to calm our "angry passions," all the while-when the desperadoes seemingly relaxed their embrace of the woman's neck, and the next moment, the dulcet notes of the garroted female greeted our ears: "Don't Hughy, dear! Don't Patrick, me darlin'! Don't! D-o-n-t! D-o-n-!" Not alternately to the right and the left; in close proximity to the bushy whiskers of Hughy and Patrick, she seemed perfectly resigned to her fate. We started instanter on our winding way for home, and would not have stopped again had a dozen attempts been made, on our route, to garotte any number of good and lawful citizens of our embryo eity.-Elmira Advertiser.

Of Mr. Bennett, personally, we know nothing; having never seen him, or even heard a person speak of him who has been honored with his acquaintance. But his reputation is the common property of all lovers of the noble maxims which he inculcates, the morality which he teaches, and the virtue which he adorns, in a style at once the purest and most fascinating. Under his glowing pen, vice is stripped of its gaudy coloring and held up for abhorrence in all its haggard deformity; while virtue, humble and lowly, clothed in rags, is won from its timid heart may do it homage.

Let those who have never yet been familiar with his writings read, and they can judge for themselves whether we have over estimated the abilities of Emerson Bennett as a writer.

Both of these works are in press and will be published by T. B. PETERSON, No. 102 Chestnut street, Phila., on the 7th and 14th of March .--Copies of either will be sent to any one to any part-of the United States, free of postage, on remitting the price to the Publisher.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE GLOBE.

HARRISBURG, March 7, 1857.

MR. EDITOR:-I have thought a short account of a week's sojourn in this city, might interest some of your readers. I have therefore, taken my porcupine in hand, to spin you out something in the shape of a communication. I left Huntingdon county, where I had spent a pleasant winter, in a small town, on the bank of the Juniata, and arrived here on Monday morning at eight c'clock.----The city was quite brisk ; that being the day the Democratic Convention met. Politicians and every body else, seemed interested in its proceedings; all seeming to realize that the next Governor was to be chosen that day. I stopped at the United States Hotel. It is a good house-gets up big dinners-big prices also. On Tuesday, the city was nearly deserted-the Legislature having adjourned until the 9th inst., and many of the citizens went to attend the inauguration. Wednesday evening I visited the reading room of the Young Mens' Christian Association. They have quite an extensive library of useful books, and their tables are covered with late a struggle made she; and dropping her head newspapers, magazines, &c. This is a laudable enterprise, and the originators and managers of it, deserve credit for thus providing a place where young men may pleasantly and beneficially pass their evenings, instead of insaloons and grog shops. John B. Gough, the popular temperance lecturer, is to address wish to see Kansas as it was a few years since, "Tie my hands!" he shrieked. A struggle will find in this most exciting story some very was inevitable—it came.—It is indisputable, says Mercier, that Louis fought with his executioners. The Abbe Edgeworth stood by, perplexed, horrified, speechless. At last as his master seemed to look inquiringly at him, he said, "Sir, in this additional outrage I only see a last trait of the resemblance between your majesty and the God who will give you your reward." At these words, the indignation of the man gave way to the humility of the Christian. and Louis said to the executioners, "I will drain the cup to the dregs." They tied his hands, they cut off his hair, and then, leaning on the arm of his confessor, he began with a slow tread and sinking demeanor, to lotine. Upon the last step, however, he scemed suddenly to rouse, and walked rapid-ly across to the other side of the scaffold; when, by a signal commanding silence, he exclaimed, "I die innocent of the crimes im-puted to me." His face was now very red, and, according to the narrative of his confes-sor, his voice was so loud that it could be mount the steps, then very steep, of the guilretreat, and brought forth that the good in lotine. Upon the last step, however, he seemed suddenly to rouse, and walked rapidsor, his voice was so loud that it could be heard through the streets as far as the Point Tournament. Some other expressions were distinctly heard: I pardon the authors of my death; and I pray Heaven that the blood you are about to shed may never be visited All the one undivided half part of that parcel and lot of ground situate in Tod township, Huntingdon county, con-taining about 3 acres, having a large Steam Tannery build-ings and fixtures thereon erected, including a five horse or in anticipation of the orders of Saterre...-"Silence! be silent!" cried Louis XVI, losing all self-control, and stamping violent-ly with his foot. Richard, one of the execu-tioners, then seized a pistol, and took aim at the King. It was necessary to drag him upon France." He was about to continue, the King.
