CORRESPONDENCE OF THE GLOBE.

HARRISBURG, March 30, 1857. DEAR GLOBE: It is hardly modest, now-apolitics. Therefore, I shall not indulge in complished by the grand agglomeration powwow held in the State Capitol, on Wednesday and Thursday of last week. If it eventuate in any approach to consolidation of the discordant factions which are arrayed in opposition to Democracy, it will be solely because Know-Nothingism has become merged in Black Republicanism.

"Certain it is, that so far as the Convention meant anything, it was neither more nor less than an enormous act of deglutition-Sambo swallowing Sam. It remains to be seen whether the constituency of the delegates in attendance from dark lantern districts will succumb to this arrangement, and tamely permit themselves to be thus meanly auctioned off in the shambles of office-seekers. And it remains further to be seen at the next fall election, whether Pennsylvania, in old times so steadfast in the right, is to be wheeled into the ranks of Northern fanaticism, and placed at variance with the solid interests of the Union.

- There can be no question that our State is still the battle-ground, where Democratic vicfory can alone ensure the Union's calm .--More really now than ever before, is it the Keystone of the Federal Arch-that triumphal arch beneath which the stately procession of ten thousand bleeding warriors and pure statesmen have passed to a pleasant eternity. Gon save our Commonwealth from all ignoble uses !

-As--you have read elsewhere, there was much bickering in the unnatural course of assimilating the odds and ends of this heterogenous Convention. During the first day, if much resembled a second edition of the Rump Parliament. I verily believe; if it had not been for the presence of a number of us, who helped ourselves to seats without credentials, everything would have gone wrong .-We constituted a firmly organized opposition to _all measures, except that of adjournment -which question was only allowed to prevail when the hour was fixed at seven in the evening. The vote being taken viva voce gave us ample opportunity to be heard. And when there was no voting to be done, our party illustrated their position by calling for Cox and Smith, and other powerful orators supposed to flourish in remote rural districts. when a John Smith occasionally did take the floor: asthma became suddenly epidemic, and there was some coughing to be done. Meanwhile, I must "EXPLAIN" (as the Journal says to Dr. Wintrode,) that I represented my constituency of Ground Hog Valley with becoming dignity; and so secure am I of their approbation, that, after the final adjournment. I recommended Judge Jones to return home to Hollidaysburg by that route, rather than to; run any risk by passing through Altoona in daylight. . On Thursday evening, after the ticket had been amalgamated, there was a Republican to be seen running around the town in a cover his wager, and shook hands with himself in sure expectation of winning, as the candidates on both sides were named Lewis. But ica, and am pleased to say that the proficiency | evening, when it took a short game of "peep." there reason to believe from what can be hasted along. On arriving at Mechanics had was good enough. POSTSCRIPT. When I closed the letter for this morning's mail, I little thought this melancholy postscript would be added.

Little WILLIE CRANGLE is no more.

In your town of Huntingdon, there are young hearts that will throb with grief as they read that line and pause to make themselves sure their pleasant playfellow will return to them never again.

Spring will soon come, with the green grass and young flowers and glad song of birds; bright Summer will follow after, and fruitful Autumn, and hoary Winter will come and go in the season's train: but he whose sweet eyes brightened and pure heart grew happier with theirs, in the sports of Springs and Summers gone, shall return to their circle, nevermore.

Not many weeks ago, when the moonlight was bright upon the snow-drifts, his sled was with the merry throng upon the hill-side, and his voice was heard among the clear tones that rang out upon the frosty breeze. And to-night, while he lays in silence, beneath the sorrowing watch of those who loved him: and other nights, when he lays beneath the moss on the bank of the Susquehanna; and for many, many days and nights to come, while time shall last, far up in the blue sky, beyond the great golden sun, and beyond the farthest little star, WILLIE's voice will be heard in the army of cherubs, chanting praises etcrnally to HIM who hath brought them triumphantly to the thither shore of death's dark river.

At this hour, there is sadness in the hearts of all his friends-and WILLIE had many; friends among the old as well as young .--There is the gloom of grief in a mother's breast, and in the breasts of those other friends who loved him with parents' love.

After mailing my letter to the Globe, I had prary, turning over the leaves of David Paul ing, to meet the rising sun upon its eastern' track-more radiant now than that sun, his spirit clad in robes of immortal beauty. WILLIE was good and gentle and winning in his manners; an apt student, and gifted with natural abilities that were developed far beyond his years. Next day Hon. Ellis Lewis positively declined the nomination; and it is not likely that the Democratic party will give it to another member of the Lewis family; hence, the successful.

Another droll incident of the Convention was the bona fide presence of the original dog-chub. It actually registered itself at my hotel. Not appearing at table, however, I was for some time apprehensive that the ccoks had served it up for dinner (a la Washington rat-soup); but none of the boarders being seized with "Buchanan grip," it is right to conclude that the forlorn little animal, after taking the bearings of where it had got to, made its escape into less troubled waters. It doubtless had come hither in obedience to the poet's sublime injunction:

"Up from the sands, ye codlings creep, 'And wag your tails about !"
