Good and Bad Laws. We have thirty-one sovereign States and seven Territories, with a national government, having limited powers, though plenary on certain subjects, over them all. Within the States there are numerous city, village, and other subordinate authorities. All of these are clothed with powers of legislation, more or less extensive. The persons exercising them may be presumed to possess every variety of qualification, from the lowest to is not extraordinary that the laws should be varied in their character, some good and others bad. The motives of the legislators, although presumed to be good, may sometimes be questioned, but it rests with those who impeach them to establish the accusation.— Probably no legislative body in the Union has been so fortunate as to please everybody in all its laws. Every State has at some time enacted laws which a portion of its people condemn as unwise or unconstitutional. All such matters are of local consideration, and are soon settled as such. In Maine, Massachusetts and New York, their liquor laws have been the subject of the most exciting controversy. In the latter State, their canal enactments aroused angry and bitter feelings, and her courts declared one of them unconstitutional and void, as it did their stringent liquor enactments. Statutes in other States have been declared unconstitutional and void. These things warrant us in saying that bad laws are not confined to any one State or Territory, nor good ones the exclusive characteristic of either. Until recently, criticisms upon legislative action have usually been confined to those to be affected by it. The "Maine-law" enactments aroused only those subject to their provisions. The New York and Massachusetts passenger laws, which the United States Supreme Court held to be in conflict with the national constitution, disturbed those only whose interests were affected by their operation. But it has been left to the meddling propensities of a sect of political perfectionists, in our day, to extend a ware. Corn comes forward slowly, and is in fair request, without change in prices; sales of 2500 bushels new yellow and some only and some old in store at the same figure. Oats United States Supreme Court held to be in querulous supervision over laws to which they are not amenable. Not content with denouncing enactments which displease them, they misrepresent and falsify their provisions so as to afford an apology for denouncing them with greater vehemence and effect. This has been emphatically true in relation to the laws of Kansas. Those of Nebraska and other Territories, as well as in the States, fail to attract their attention, or afford them no cause of complaint. They all escape criticism, while those in Kansas are denounced as wick-ET-Two questions to the slavery agitators, who are so ed and unjust, but mainly on account of their them there are many containing wise provisions, not inferior to those of the old thirteen States. These unexceptionable laws the faultfinders never openly approved. She passed some that were unwise and bad, which ranked with many condemned elsewhere by the people, or declared null by their courts, and which she has since repealed. Instead of informing their readers of this repeal, and advising that what they objected to have ceased to exit, the black-republican papers mislead their readers into the belief that they are still in force and work out the grossest wrongs .-They overlook all the objectionable laws which immediately concern them, and those in other States and Territories of a kindred character, and open their batteries upon those in Kansas, and attempt to demolish them, main-

MAPS—700 ENGRAVINGS.—A HISTORY OF ALL NATIONS,
From the earliest period to the present time, the history of every nation, ancient and modern, being separately given. By S. G. Goodberg, author of several worksof History, 'Peter Parley's Tales,' &c.
It is believed that the above work will be very acceptable to the American public. It is the result of years of toil and labor, assisted in his researches by several scholars of known children and have been great and the court of the second of toli and labor, assisted in his researches by several scholars of known ability, and has been got up at a great expenso by the proprietors. No pains have been spared in the execution of the Illustrations and Manz, which are prepared expressly for this work. Indeed, all the other historical writing of Mr. Goodrich, sink into insignificance, when compared to this, the result of his riper and maturer years. It is admitted that one hundred dollars could not purchase It is admitted that one hundred dollars could not purchase the same matter in any other shape, and the publishers confidently expect, in consideration of the great literary value of the work, the large sum expended in preparing it for the press, and the exceedingly moderate price at which it is offered, that it will be favorably received by every lover of good books. Many of our first scholars, divines and gentlemen, who have examined the work, have given it their unqualified approbation and commendation, which it richly deserves.
