Arrest of a Supposed Murderer. Some misconception exists in respect to The Harrisburg Telegraph of Wednesday afternoon, says : A man by the name of William Williams was brought to town this morning, in charge of Officer Nolen, of Wisconisco, having been committed by Justice Ferree, of the same township, on suspicion of the murder of Daniel Henrick, at Bear Gap, on or about the 3d of this month. Williams is a machinist, who has been employed in that vicinity a suspicious character. The body of the with me." murdered man was found a few day ago, in a private path leading to the coal mines, and upon an investigation, two holes were found in his body, which were examined by a physician, and both found to have been made by gravel stones shot from a rifle.

A Coroner's inquest being held, a verdict was given in accordance with the above facts. When discovered, the body was lying in a secluded part of the path, and looked as if he had fallen asleep there, which the discoverers supposed, until they approached nearer. Suspicion was at once cast upon ges." Williams, from the fact of his having been last seen with Henrick in that neighborhood, and on further investigation a watch was obtained from him, known to have belonged to the deceased, and of which he could not give a satisfactory account of how he received it. Further evidence was brought against him, from the fact that he had borrowed a gun and gone into the woods with him, where he acknowledged that he had fired it several times. We learn that other evidence can also be produced, showing clearly that he is guilty of the murder. SLANDER AND SUICIDE .- A correspondent writing from Newport, Me., under date of May 20, furnishes the following particulars of the sad death of a young lady: "Miss Mary Martin, a very pretty and in telligent young lady, of about 20 years of age committed suicide by drowning herself in the stream at Detroit, the town adjoining this .--She invited a young lady friend to walk with her, and seating herself upon a log near the stream, she told her friend that she was about to drown herself, and the reason for so doing. She took off all her jewelrv and gave it to the young lady, saying "I want you to have these." In a few moments after her friend persuaded her to return to the house, telling her that they would come down in the afternoon. They had proceeded only about five or six rods, when Miss Martin caught hold of her friend and dragged her towards the stream a rod or two, but suddenly releasing her hold, she ran and jumped in. Her friend gave the alarm, and a brother of Miss

Martin came to her relief, but too late-life was extinct when her body was taken out .--The cause for this melancholy suicide was slander. During the past winter stories have been circulated to injure her character. She protested her innocence, and but a few weeks before, while walking near the place where she was drowned, with the young man to whom she was engaged, she said (referring to her troubles) "If I thought there was no happier days in store for me, I would jump in and drown myself." The great point in the treatment of all human maladies, is to get at, the disease in the direct manuer.— All medicines are estimated by their action upon the organ All medicines are estimated by their action upon the organ requiring relief. This is the important fact upon which Inhalation is based. If the stomach is discased we take medicine directly into the stomach. If the lungs are dis-eased, breathe or inhale medicated vapors directly into the lungs. Medicines ure antidotes to disease and should be applied to the very seat of discase. Inhalation is the application of this principle to the treatment of the lungs, for it gives us direct access to those intricute air cells, and tubos which lie out of reach of every other means of ad-ministering medicines. The reakson that Consumption. tubos which lie out of reach of every other means of ad-ministering medicines. The reason that Consumption, and other diseases of the lungs, have heretofore-resisted all treatment has been because they have never been ap-proached in a direct manner by medicine. They were in-tended to act upon the lungs, and yet were applied to the stomach. Their action was intended to be local, and yet, they were so administered that they should only act con-stitutionally, expending their immediate and principal ac-tion upon the unoffending stomach, whilst the foul ulcers within the lungs were unnolested. Inhalation brings the medicine in direct contact with the disease, without the disadvantage of any violent action. Its application is the disadvantage of any violent action. Its application is so simple, that it can be employed by the youngest infant or feedlest invalid. It does not derange the stomach, or in-terfere in the least degree with the strength, comfort, or business of the patient.
