'Sam' Giving 'Sambo' Particular Jes- te. The Juniata Sentinel, published in Millifin-town, lately contained the farewell speech and confession of its retiring editor, A. J. GREER, who, after being trepanned into the support of Fremont last fall, has no idea that by it he "bound himself to the ultra car of Black Republicanism for all coming time."

Supreme Court. INJUNCTION.—An application for an injunc-tion has been made to the Supreme Court at Harrisburg to restrain the sale of the State Canal and Railroad improvements, known as the Main Line, which sale has been provided for by a recent act of the Legislature. The suit is brought by Henry S. Mott, a stockholder in the Pennsylvania Rail-road Company, against the President, Direc-tors, and other officers of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Mr. Mott, the plaintiff, being also one of the Canal Commissioners.

South Carolina to Garrison, Beecher & Co. Do you believe that the great God and Father of us all is wiser to-day than He was six thousand years ago? Do you believe that God did not pronounce the great judgment upon Ham and his de-scendants, that a servant of servants shall thy seed be forever on earth? Do you not believe that God recognized and established among His chosen people the institution of slavery, and nowhere, from Genesis to Revelations, condemns it as in-jurious?

When he was shown to her room, she rose up almost insano with agony and her eyes streaming with tears, and extended her arms to meet him, when he turned upon her with a sour look, and bade her, in a surly tone, "Sit down! sit down!" The wretched wife, bursting into a fit of uncontrollable grief, inquired, "What have I ever done that you should treat me and my dear little child in this manner?" His only reply was, "I don't love you, and can't be happy with you, you must forget me, and you can find some one else to love you."

HUNTINGDON & BROAD TOP RAIL ROAD. SUMMER ARRANGEMENT. On and after Monday, June 18th, 1857, PASSENGER TRAINS will run as follows: MORNING TRAIN.

Dismissing the Union. An ominous muttering is borne on the breeze from Ohio. The New York Tribune, of Monday, in great glee, says: "We give this morning full particulars of the conflict between the Marshals of the United States and the State officers of Ohio, in the discharge of duty by the individuals who were arrested on Wednesday for assisting the U. S. Deputy Marshal were committed to prison on Saturday last."

That all of said property known as the Main Line, has been advertised by the Governor for sale at the Philadelphia Exchange, on the 25th day of June, 1857, at public auction. It then stated that the President and Directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company threaten and intend to bid for and purchase, or to cause to be bid for and purchased, for their use, the said canals and railroads and other property, known as the said Main Line of the Public Works of the State, at the said public sale or vendue thereof, or whenever the same may be sold, at any adjourned public sale or vendue thereof, and that they threaten and intend to execute and deliver to the State the bonds of the said Company, to the amount of nine millions of dollars in liquidation of the purchase money thereof, and to take possession of and maintain the said canals and railroads, and encounter and assume all the debts, expenses and obligations incident to the purchase, maintenance and repairs thereof, to the manifest injury and detriment of your orator and such other stockholders and corporators of the said Company as refuse to assent to the adventure and speculation intended to be embarked in by the President and Directors.

Do you not believe that the first slaves brought to this country from Africa were kidnapped and sold by the English? Do you not know that New England had a large share in its traffic and its profits? Do you not know that our Congress, about the year 1800, desired its suppression, but was opposed by the northern vote because of the vast interest she had in the matter, and in consequence and to favor that interest the law did not take effect before the year 1808?

Do you not believe that the world could better spare any other set of people and territory of land in the wide, wide world than the slaves and territory of the South? Do you not believe that slavery and cotton and the cotton plant, are the main-springs of commerce, navigation, the arts, and every thing that makes us feared and respected? INFANTICIDE.—On Saturday morning last, a woman went to the river bank near the Viaduct between this place and Gaysport, to get a pail of water, and in the act of dipping it up observed in the stream a small bundle, which excited her curiosity, and which upon examination she found to be the remains of an infant wrapped in a muslin cloth, with a cord around its neck, to the end of which there was attached a brick. Notice was sent to Coroner Funk, who was promptly on the ground, and proceeded to hold an inquest.

Be CAREFUL OF THE NEW CENTS.—A medical friend informs the New York Tribune that he has been consulted in several cases where the new cent has been swallowed by children, one of whom is only two years old, and in which great irritation of the stomach and bowels has followed, because of the corrosive nature of the metals composing it, as well as of its mechanical action upon the delicate mucous surface.

AN EXTRAORDINARY HYPOCRITE.—Jackson, who was murdered in Russell, Miss., by Charles Jones, was taken to Hartford, Conn., for burial in the Hebrew fashion. The Hartford Times says: "Jones, the murderer, was a Millerite, and the same fellow who has just served out a term of four years in the Connecticut State Prison for robbing John Dean's store. He was the coolest scoundrel that ever invested this city. He professed great concern for the souls of sinners, and was constantly reading the Bible and exhorting at evening meetings. Whilst in the confidence of Mr. Dean, he stole about $2,000 worth of goods from his store, together with considerable sums of money. He stole the silk to make him a surplice to preach in—started a church at Glastenbury—stole the trimmings for his pulpit, and velvet for his chair, and also stole goods to pay the cabinet maker for the chair; broke into the Catholic Church and stole the priest's robe for a sample for one of himself, and also stole the silver chalice &c. from the altar—called Mr. Dean's one afternoon to have a little season of prayer, &c. remained till evening had done the family good by, but instead of going out of the door, he stole up stairs, and secreted himself under the bed occupied by Mr. Dean's son—remained there till past midnight, when he crept out and robbed young Dean's pockets of $100, (which he had secured the day previous that he had just procured from the bank), then went up to St. John's Hotel, called for lodgings, got up before daylight, stole a suit of clothes from a boarder, and cleared for a neighboring town. But this is not half his villainies. He was constantly stealing, praying and exhorting, till brought up by a four years' term in prison."

Hallenbeck, the Seducer of Miss Steadman. We have already mentioned the elopement of a Miss Steadman, from a female academy at Auburn, N. Y., with a married man named Hallenbeck. We find in the Auburn American the following account of an interview between the villain and his deserted wife: We learn from a gentleman belonging to the Northern Hotel in this city that Hallenbeck—the seducer of Miss Steadman—was there on Monday, the 25th inst., and that an interview took place between him and his deserted wife. She is described as a beautiful and interesting woman, of unimpeachable character. Hearing that her husband was there, she came with her little child in her arms to persuade her wandering husband to return to his wife and family. The scene is represented as one calculated to draw tears from one with a heart of marble, as the heartless seducer was called to confront his virtuous and injured wife and forsaken child. "The step-mother of the seduced girl had likewise heard that the destroyer of her honor and peace was there, and she also appeared to him to upbraid him, but toward all he manifested a brutal insensibility, while the bystanders were affected to tears. It was a scene to melt the hardest heart, as the mother stood with her child in her arms and offered up a prayer to God to turn the heart of her unfaithful husband and the unnatural father of her children again to the family which he had so cruelly deserted. He maintained a stolid indifference—treating her supplications with contempt, and even spurning her from him with violence only to be found in a savage. At first he told her she could not stay under the same roof with him, but at length consented that she might remain for the night.
