English Wealth and Luxuriousness.

Some of our New York Fifth avenue swells make very respectable attempts to do the "palatial" in their houses, and style of livng, and put forth ambitious efforts to imitate English country seats, in the possession of what English would call a "snug box"on the Hudson River, and ten, twenty, or a hundred acres. An account, before us, of the luxurious style of living among the English aristocracy, throws our parvenu pretenders considerably into the shade:

About sixty miles from London, is the estate of the Earl of Spencer, which comprises ten thousand acres, divided into parks, meadows, pastures, woods, and gardens.— His library contains fifty thousand volumes, and is said to be the finest private library in the world. The Duke of Richmond's home farm consists of twenty-three thousand acres, or over thirty-five square miles, and this in crowded England, which has in all, an area of only 50,000 square miles, or just 32 millions of acres, giving, were the land divided, but two acres to each inhabitant. The residence of the Duke is fitted up with oriental magnificence. Twenty-five race horses stand in his stables, each under the care of a special groom. The dishes and plate upon the table, are all of porcelain, silver and gold .-His aviary is supplied with almost every variety of rare and elegant birds, and large herds of cattle, sheep and deer, are spread over the immense lawns.

The same authority from which we gather these facts, says that the Duke of Devonshire's palace, at Chatsworth, excels in magnificence, any other of the kingdom. He spends the whole of his enormous income,— In the grounds about the house, are kept four hundred head of cattle, and fourteen hundred deer. The kitchen garden contains twelve acres, and is filled with almost every species of fruit and vegetables. A vast arborstum connected with his establishment, is designed to contain a sample of every tree that grows. There is also a glass conserva-tory, 387 feet in length, 112 feet in breadth, 67 feet in height, covered with 76,000 square feet of glass, and warmed by several miles of pipe, conveying hot water. One plant was obtained from India, by a special messenger, and is valued at $10,000. One of the fountains, near the house, plays 267 feet high, said to be the highest jet in the world.— Chatsworth contains 3,500 acres, but the Duke owns ninety-six thousand acres in the county of Derbyshire. Within, the entire is one vast scene of paintings, sculpture, mosaic work, carved wainscotting, and all the elegancies and luxuries within the reach of almost boundless wealth and highly refined

Five-sixths of the soil in England is divided among scarcely thirty thousand proprietors. There are twenty-nine bankers in London, whose transactions yearly embrace six or seven hundred millions sterling. This is one side of the picture. The struggles between capitol and labor are fearful—the rich always becoming richer, and the poor poorer. Three hundred thousand persons die of famine in a year, (?) and three hundred thousand voluntarily emigrate, to escape the same dismal doom .- Richmond Disputch.

Mr. Editor:—Allow me to make a remark about miners and mining operations on Broad Top. Since the coal works started there have been not a few adventurous speculators who have represented themselves as Practical Miners, Engineers and Geologists. But out of charity, I would excuse their presumption, and say that they came here to speculate, and maybe to learn. Aman may be smart enough in the business in which he has been educated, but it does not follow that every Tom, Dick and Harry, who can readily distinguish between an Act of Assembly and a pile of coal, is a Practical Miner, Engineer and Geologist; and it would be well for such pretenders to desist in their criticisms, and condemnations of the work and mining operations of those who have devoted their lives to the business and understand it well, or else they may run again a rock and further expose their ignorance!

It would be well for all proprietors of coal mines to consult their interests and secure the services of practical miners. Perhaps science is better than speculation; and will produce a larger yield of coal with less ex-

A GIRL GONE MAD FOR LOVE,—A beautiful German girl named Hannah Rootker, was taken to the Commercial Hospital, vesterday morning, a raving maniac—her reason completely overthrown by disappointment in love. It seems that she had been engaged to one of her countrymen for some months, and had fully expected to become his wife, when her father informed her last Saturday that she should not marry.

Upon this announcement she fell, as if struck by lightning, to the floor, and it was with much difficulty she was restored to consciousness. She then began raving frightfully, and with cries and screams and tears and lamentations, startled the entire neighborhood of Bremen street, where she resided. Nothing could be done to appease her-she grew worse and worse, until it was determined to remove her to the Hospital.

When there, she continued to rave, and would have died from exhaustion before this, had not chloroform been administered to keep her quiet. It was found necessary, too, to bind her to the floor, else she would have her own life, leaned out of the window, or done anything desperate. The physicians who saw her say they never before beheld so violent a maniac.

It is pitiable to observe this young and beautiful woman, just in the spring of life, suffering-and how intensely she must suffer -all the horrors of madness, because of a generous and absorbing passion which might and should have made her happiness on

In the "Ladies' Wreath," published by the students of Warrior's Mark Seminary, we find the following pathetic lines to the memory of HARRY M. NEFF, son of Dr. H. K. & Mary M. Neff, and by request publish the same :-LITTLE HARRY.

LITTLE HARRY was one of nature's noblemen in miniature. His sparkling, deeply penetrating eye, his elastic step, his peculiar nervous temperament, his tenacions memory, his extraordinary analytical powers, his ability to trace cause to effect, and to attribute effect to cause, his profound and apposite questions when investigating any subject, all proclaimed him an intellectual prodigy. His versatility of genius and snavity of manners, made him a universal favorite. Had he lived to maturity, his num a universal revoluce. Had no lived to maturity, his energy of character and intellectual worth, would have insured him a conspicuous part in the great drama of life.—But Little Harry was not permitted to appear upon the stage of mortal strife. A wise and benevolent Father saw fit to take him home to the skies.

His rising sun melted away into the mellow light of Heaven, like a star hiding itself in the resplendent glories of the eye of day.

Dropped from a diadom:"

He was a plant too pure and too lovely for earth's poisonous vale. He was a bud too ieader for earth's shady dell. He was a flower too exquisite for the grosser light of the material sun: therefore he was transplanted into the richer soil of Paradise, there to be nurtured by the fostering care of a blessed Redeemer. There will he bud and blossom, and bloom as the rose, under the genial rays of the "Sun of Righteousness." We mourn the loss of our dear little school-mate; his innocent laugh and musical voice are no more heard in our midst; his seat in the family circle is vacant, and his toys have passed into the hands of another. A place is vacant at our hearth, Which never can be filled. Death has been his early lot, To case him of his pain, Yet ne'er by us shall be forgot, That sweet and loving name.

A voice we loved is stilled:

Yes, he's gone to dwell in Heaven— Little Willie, loved and dear, And we shall not behold him, Till we go to meet him there.

Weep not for him, mother, aunts and uncles dear, For he is not dead, but sleeping here; Prepare for death, for die you must, And with your Willie, sleep in dust.

Dr. Hardman treats Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Larryngittis and all diseases of the throat and lungs, by Medical Inhalation, lately used in the Bromton Hospital, London. The great point in the treatment of all human maladies, is to get at the disease in the direct manner.—All medicines are estimated by their action upon the organ requiring relief. This is the important fact upon which Inhalation is based. If the stomach is diseased we take medicine directly into the stomach. If the lungs are diseased, breathe or inhale medicated vapors directly into the lungs. Medicines are antidotes to disease and should be applied to the very sent of disease. Inhalation is the application of this principle to the treatment of the lungs, for it gives us direct access to those intricate air cells, and tubes which lie out of reach of every other means of administering medicines. The reason that Consumption, and other diseases of the lungs, have heretofore resisted all treatment has been because they have never been approached in a direct manner by medicine. They were intended to act upon the lungs, and yet were applied to the stomach. Their action was intended to be local, and yet, they were so administered that they should only act constitutionally, expending their immediate and principal action upon the unoflending stomach, whilst the foul ulcers within the lungs were unmolested. Inhalation brings the medicine in direct contact with the disease, without then upon the unoncoming stomach, whilst the four dicers within the lungs were unmolested. Inhalation brings the medicine in direct contact with the disease, without the disadvantage of any violent action. Its application is so simple, that it can be employed by the youngest infant or feeblest invalid. It does not derange the stomach, or interfere in the least degree with the strength comfort on ousiness of the patient.

Other Diseases Treated.—In relation to the following diseases, either when complicated with lung affections or cxisting alone. I also invite consultation, I usually find them psus and all other forms of Female Complaints, Ir regularities and Weakness.
