MECHANICSBURG, Aug. 13, 1857. MR. EDITOR:-Having frequently resolved since my so-journ here, to scratch a few lines for your truly interesting journal; this Thursday evening, (with the heat of the sun rather increased than diminished, and mercury at 98,) I undertake the task.

The first question to be solved is, what I shall scribble about. Shall I speak of the agricultural facilities of Cumberland county? Of the towering mountains which girt it on either side? And of the rippling brooks which wind their way to the wide and beautiful Susquehanna? Perhaps this had better be the topic.

This county (ranking as it does, among the first in the State,) extends from the Susquehanna, at Harrisburg, a south-westerly direction to Shippensburg, a distance of near fifty miles. On the north, the Blue mountain bounds its entire length, with the broken fragments of the South mountain for its boundary on the south, embracing an area of near five hundred square miles, out of which near four hundred is good tillable land .----Within the boundary above described, lies one of the most productive agricultural counties that decorates the old Keystone of the ings. Arch. Yet, with all this, the people who possess the most, seem to be the less thankful, for the old dutch farmers cling to their half dollars with the tenacity of a death grasp, seeming to build their hopes upon what the great English poet called TRASH.

This county not only surpasses many others in the State, in the superior quality of its soil, but all other requisites for living independently, and happy in proportion. Water (pure and sparkling) gushes from almost every elevated spot. Fruit of all descriptions grow spontaneously on every farm, which, by the way, comes exceedingly handy.

Among the streams which flow in silent majesty through this delightful spot of Pennsylvania, the Conedoguinit ranks first. Having its fountain in the western portion of the county, hard by the base of the Blue mountain, it commences its course, though at first but a small brook murmuring proudly among the pebbles, yet it gathers in strength, majesty and beauty every mile, and empties into the Susquehanna at Fairview, two miles above Harrisburg, being near as large as Raystown Branch at the Juniata.

On the southern side of the county, the not less beautiful stream, very mysteriously named the "Yellow Breeches," winds its course along the base of the South mountain. forming the division line between Cumberland and York counties.

This stream is very similar in size and appearance to the Conedoguinit, though having connected with its early history less song and story. The towns, villages, and hamlets of Cumberland county, are numerous. Carlisle, (as you all well know,) being the county tented, and finally induced her husband to

We perceive that some of our cotemporaries are exercised because General W. F. Correspondence of the N. Y. Tribune. Mrs. Cunningham's Sister.

NIAGARA FALLS, Aug. 10, 1857.

I concluded my last by promising to tell you how Mrs. Cunningham's eldest sister, Sarah, freed herself from her husband, and swindled his legal heirs out of his property. That unlucky individual had accumulated an estate of some $25,000 or $30,000, and this it was that induced Sarah Hempstead to inveigle him into matrimony. Their first visit to Middletown -a beautiful village on the bank of the Connecticut-was not a very pleasant one, and the second was more disagreeable still. Sarah and her sister Ann soon become impatient under the restraint imposed by the social condition of Middletown, and their eccentricities speedily excluded them from all association with those to whom the husband of the former had introduced his wife and sister.

On the second visit, in the Autumn after the marriage, Sarah was uneasy and discontake passage with her for New York, in a forests of our Pacific coast, with naught but vessel of which he was the owner. He had

> From the Elwood (Kansas) Advertiser. To the Maidens of the East.

When enumerating the inducements to emigration, which our flourishing town of Elwood furnishes, it little becomes us to slight the ladies, in our addresses to capitalists and persons seeking to better their fortunes. We would say to the fair maids of the older States, that here are many young men, of enterprise, good looks and prospective wealth; all of whom are in the matrimonial mart, seeking for some companion to their solitary hours, some gentle, loving spirit to watch over their moments of weariness, and strengthen them by kind words and sweet smiles for the rugged scenes of a frontier life. Who that ever lived far from the haunts of civilized man, where no church bell rings its welcome summons to poor mortals wearied with the strife and deceit of week-day life, where the broad prairie spreads its boundless expane, with no cabin save your own to gladden the heart, no tree to shelter you from the rays of a mid-day seat, and the principal business town. LETTER FROM MINNESOTA TERRITORY.-The Commissioner of Patents received, several days since, an interesting letter from Mr. O. H. Kelly, of Northwood, Wright county, Minnesota Territory, dated July 16. Mr. Kelly states that the prospects of the farmers on the Mississippi, above the Falls of St. Anthony, were certainly rather discouraging this season, owing to the havoc made by the grasshoppers. He hoped to be able to harvest about one-half of the ground he had planted, as everything left by the grasshoppers looked promising, and the weather was hot, and showers were frequent. Several days previous to the date of his letter, about talks to the Americans : 10 o'clock in the morning, the grasshoppers rose simultaneously for a distance of over thirty miles on the river banks, and went into the air. Which way they flew, or where they now were, he knew not; he only knew that they had started all at once by tens of thousands, and were gone, he hoped never to return.

"The party or faction that would introduce equality of the races, and make you the associate of the negro, and bring you down on a level with this inferior race of unfortunate creatures? Will you give your votes to sustain and perpetuate Black Republicanism-a measure as "black as the African himself," as iniquitous as the rank doings of the Robesperian faction, who, had they not been arrested in their mad career, would not only have deluged France in blood, but the world! Principles as damning as were ever disseminated by Hume and his coadjutors, the infamous French infidels! A party at war with Bible teachings on the slavery question; at war with the advancement and elevation of white men; bringing them down to the degraded level to the descendants of Ham! Will ye serve such a party and say I have done no harm? Will ye recklessly throw aside your dearest. cherished principles and aid in giving influence to such practices, such teachings, such rank infidelity?"

Of course, it would be impossible at this education of young ladies. It is under the late day, to ascertain the truth in respect to the suspicions entertained by the mother-inlaw of Sarah in connection with this transaction; but her impression of the guilt of the woman amounted to actual conviction. She persisted in charging the death of her son upon his wife so long as she lived, and always maintained that the child which was presented to inherit her son's property was not the offspring of her son and his wife, but the fruit of an illicit amour, in which Ann was known Cancelling Postage Stamps.

The Postal arrangement between the Uni-ted States and the British North America Provinces, allows the transmission of letters, with or without pre-paying of postage, as is preferred. But no part payment will be recognized-it goes for nothing. The postage on a single letter is ten cents, and if three stamps of three cents each are affixed, they are not regarded, as full postage required on delivering the letter. The practice of defacing or cancelling stamps on such letters prepaid in part has prevailed, perhaps, universally, and consequently quite a large amount in value of stamps, is thus lost to parties, without any equivalent in return. A Montreal correspondent of the New York Herald, very properly calls attention to the practice of defacing the stamps under such circumstances, and suggests that the Department has no right to cancel the stamps until an equivalent has been paid for them-that the three stamps in the case supposed, should not be defaced, but left so that the party, who has been inadvertantly burdened with postage by his friend, could use them. This seems put fair, and we are gratified to learn that the P. O. Department authorizes it to be done. The Union copies the letter from the Herald, and adds: "Upon making inquiries in the proper quarter in relation to the complaint against the Post Office Department, we were authorized to say, that in the case mentioned by the writer, the Post Masters would have been justified in not cancelling the postage stamps. It is only where the stamps

Come West, ye true, warm-hearted, lifeearnest maidens of the East, ye who long for a life of action, where the intellect and the finest feelings of your better nature shall not be frittered away by the cold, unmeaning, social life of the fashionable world. Here, no scented dandy can exist, the exquisite is unknown; such animals would die, the air about them would prove as poisonous as that of the Uupas tree. He, who lives here, trusts not to the good reputation of his sire, the wealth of his friends or the social standing of his family, but each one carves out, for himself, a name, be that good or bad. Let us welcome you among us.

THRESHING BY STEAM.-A new feature in farming operations has been introduced by Col. Henry S Kupp, of Union township, Berks county. A small portable pumping engine, used on the Union Canal, has recently been put in service on his farm, to drive his threshing machine, which it does with more regularity and speed, and at less cost, than can be done by horse power. There are a number of operations about a farm where a small engine would be of great service. Such as sawing wood, lumber, rails, &c. It may not be long before plowing and seeding will be done in the same way, and when small locomotives will be running
